INFALLIBILITY.

The Dogma Adopted by the Ecumenical Council—The Vote 450 to 88.

ROME, July 13.—In the Ecumenical Council today, the dogma of infallibility was adopted by a vote of 450 affirmatives to 88 negatives.

EUROPE.

The Franco-Prussian Difficulty—Situation Yesterday Morning—German Estimate of the French Course.

PARIS, July 13.—The Constitutionnel, Ministerial organ, in its issue this morning, has the following important article:

"The Government has testimony that the candidature of Prince HOHENZOLLERN is withdrawn, and the peace of Europe will not be disturbed. We are satisfied that a HOHENZOLLERN will not reign in Spain. We demand nothing more, and rejoice at this pacific solution of the question."....A questionable dispatch from Dusseldorf, this morning, says that Prince LEOPOLD accepts the Spanish crown on the condition of immediate declaration of war against France should the latter attack Germany.

BRUSSELS, July 13—10 A. M.—The warlike preparations continue in France, notwithstanding the withdrawal of Prince LEOPOLD. There is a universal fear of war.

BERLIN, July 13.—The Kreuz Gazette of today, treats the situation in language at once serious and energetic. Its article closes with the following sentence: "Germany indignantly repels the measureless arrogance of France. Prince LEOPOLD renounces the candidature because he is unable to reconcile the character of a German soldier with an action involving Germany and Spain in war."

Count VON BISMARCK has returned to this city.

A Better Financial Feeling—German Suspicions of French Motives.

PARIS, July 13.—The Bourse opened firm. Rentes, 70f. 80c. There is a better feeling everywhere, and particularly in commercial circles, though many rumors are in circulation unfavorable to peace. It is certain that several interpellations will be made in the Corps Legislatif today touching the Spanish question. It is believed that some parties in the Chambers wish to force the Government into a declaration of war with Prussia.

LONDON, July 13.—The following dispatch, dated at Berlin, noon today, has just been received here: "In spite of the withdrawal of Prince HOHENZOLLERN, France maintains an alarming and provoking attitude toward Prussia. Personal objection was, therefore, a mere pretext. France wants a sudden and decisive war, in order to escape interior troubles, and to efface the Mexican fiasco."

Austrian Views of the Difficulty—Troops Still Moving Through Paris to the Frontier—The Bourse Again Excited—Spain Making Preparations for War.

VIENNA, July 13.—The Vienna papers denounce Prussian arrogance, and invoke the mediation of England to prevent war. The Tagespresse openly takes sides with France.

LONDON, July 13.—Telegrams from Paris confirm the reports that a feeling of distrust and insecurity still prevails on the Bourse, notwithstanding the withdrawal of Prince LEOPOLD. Troops are moving through Paris for the frontier, and there seems to be no abatement of military activity in other quarters of France. It is said that the Belgian Government is providing for warlike contingencies. All leaves of absence have been recalled, and troops have been ordered to the frontier, with instructions to destroy the railways and telegraphs in case of invasion by a foreign army.

PARIS, July 13—7 P. M.—The tone of the Constitutionnel is pacific today, but the other journals continue to fill their columns with details of warlike preparations. The Bourse to-night is agitated; Rentes have fallen to 69 francs 75 centimes.

MADRID, July 13.—Minister SAGASTA had a protracted conference, yesterday, with the Ministers of France, England and the United States. Prince CHARLES, of Hohenzollern, the father of Prince LEOPOLD, sent to Paris a copy of the dispatch which he addressed to Gen. PRIM, withdrawing his son's name as a candidate for the throne. Warlike preparations have commenced here. Orders have been signed calling out the first military reserves.

Reported Resignation of the French Cabinet—Exciting Debate in the Chambers.

PARIS, July 13.—The evening journals report that all the Ministers have resigned. The Corps Legislatif held an excited session today. Deputy JEROME DAVID submitted interpellations to the Ministry, which the Duke DE GRAMMONT refused to answer until Friday. M. DAVID thereupon pointed out the flagrant contrast between the previous haste and the present slowness of the Ministry to declare itself. Hesitation was now ridiculous in a Ministry which at first made such bold speeches, and the delay was working all the while to the advantage of Prussia. The President consulted the Chamber, and appointed Friday as the day for an answer to the interpellations.

The Yacht Cambria Spoken—Dauntless Not in Sight—The Pekin Hoax—Another Conflagration at Constantinople.

GLASGOW, July 13.—The steam-ship Sidonian which arrived today from New-York, reports that she passed the yacht Cambria at noon on the 9th inst., in latitude 54° 30', and longitude 26° 38'. The Cambria was then standing west-north-west, and had a light easterly breeze. Her competitor, the Dauntless, was not seen.

PARIS, July 13.—The Journal Officiel appears this morning with an article stating that the Government has no news of the reported massacre in China, and that the story is generally considered false.

LONDON, July 13.—There is much indignation expressed here and on the Continent at the false story of the massacre of foreigners in China. Arrangements will be made at once to ferret out and punish the author of the Post's telegram.

CONSTANTINOPLE, July 13—Another disastrous fire occurred here day before yesterday. The flames raged nine hours, in which time over 1,500 houses—mainly of a poorer class—were consumed.

CANADA.

Orange Celebrations in Toronto—Manitoba—Riel Virtually held a Prisoner by his own People.

TORONTO, Ontario, July 13.—Yesterday was celebrated pretty generally by the Orangemen thoroughout the Dominion. In this city the procession was very large, numbering many thousands. Delegations from the Orange Societies of England and Ireland were present.... The Ottawa correspondent of the Telegraph says it is reported that the Governor-General's proclamation will be issued shortly, declaring the admission of Manitoba into the Dominion. It will contain an amnesty clause. The latest advices from Fort Garry state that RIEL is virtually kept a prisoner by his own men, who have sent a guard to the line to prevent his leaving the settlement, and that both whites and Indians have sent deputations to meet the Dominion expedition and tender it the aid and assistance of the inhabitants along the route.

THE FENIAN TRIALS.

Close of the Prosecution—Argument of the Defense—Charge of the Judge.

CANANDAIGUA, N. Y., July 13.—The Fenian trial was resumed this morning at 9 o'clock. The District-Attorney called PATRICK LEAHY, of Trout River. Gen. STARR occupied a room in his house on the 26th. The witness not having arrived, Gen. STARR asked permission to testify on his own behalf. The District-Attorney objected, and the Court refused the request.

THE DEFENSE.

The defense claimed that the territory invaded was the Dominion of Quebec, not of Canada, recited in the indictment; that STARR did not originate, prepare or set on foot the expedition. He did not join it until it was on the ground, and the counsel held that the prisoner was entitled to a strict construction of the statute, and moved for his discharge. The District-Attorney replied that the indictment was correct. In regard to the other objections, there was no proof of any actual preparations by STARR, but he officiated as commander of the Fenian forces, and the prisoner's actions came within the provisions of the statutes. STARR took command and led the Fenians into Canada, and he must be regarded as setting the expedition on foot. The importance of the case grew out of the international complications involved, and as a test whether the Neutrality laws would be enforced where Great Britain was concerned. The duty of the jury was rendered difficult by the prevailing public feeling. He asked the jury to do justice not only so far as Canada was concerned, but justice to themselves, in order that war might not be forced upon the country. Hon. A. J. PARKER said he had a few points to submit on behalf of the prisoner: That the Judge should charge the jury, first, that the words of the statute, "begun and set on foot," do not apply to carrying on an expedition; second, these words are not applicable to subordinates joining an expedition after it is set on foot; third, the same do not apply to any one joining an expedition to a foreign country; fourth, that the prisoner is not responsible for acts done in a foreign country, nor does the statute apply to such.

THE CHARGE TO THE JURY.

Judge WOODRUFF, in charging the jury, alluded to the importance of the case as involving the maintenance of the national peace and security. He coincided with the prisoner's counsel that acts done in a foreign territory were not within the jurisdiction of the Court. Such acts, however, might be considered as explaining and showing the object of an expedition organized in the States. If the prisoner took command of and prosecuted a military expedition from the States into Canada, they must find him guilty. He then reviewed the testimony as to STARR's arriving on the ground and making a speech to the men; and Mr. GRINNELL'S evidence, as to its substance, was sufficiently clear. He then read statements in Buffalo papers, and charged that, according to these statements, STARR made a forward movement from Trout River, in order to prevent the United States troops from breaking up the expedition. The life and history of the prisoner, he said, excites sympathy in the minds of the jurors, and also in his own mind; but he deeply regretted that he should devote his bravery and military position to give character and inspiration to so disgraceful an enterprise.

Mr. FAUROT asked the Court to charge that the prisoner, if others set on foot the expedition unknown to him, was not responsible.

Judge WOODRUFF did not see that the case warranted such a charge.

Hon. A. J. PARKER said he wished it understood that the defense took exceptions to the points in the Judge's charge, which were not in accordance with the points requested to be charged. The Judge noted the objections, but said there was no bill of exceptions allowed in such cases.

The jury then retired to consider their verdict.

Another Case—Trial of Col. Thompson—The Verdicts in Both Trials.

CANANDAIGUA, N. Y., July 13.—THOMPSON'S case was called on, and Mr. PARKER renewed his application for a postponement until the Fall sitting, on the ground of the importance of the case. He wished to put the case in such a shape as to leave the way open for a review of judgment by a higher Court. The case was being tried in the interest of the British Government.

The Judge said the trial was not in the interest of the British Government, but to maintain the laws of their country. He could not grant an adjournment.

THE JURY.

The following jury were sworn, with two challenges by the defense: Seth Stanley, Marshal McLeod, Jasper Thompson, T. E. Richardson, J. L. Johnson, Milton Warner, E. C. Green, Louis Wiley, C. Spear, C. E. Reid, C. H. Wilbur and A. Babbitt.

THE TESTIMONY.

Mr. SICARD opened the case in a speech similar to that of yesterday, and called

PATRICK SHIELD, of Malone, stated that Tuesday or Wednesday before the fight he saw the prisoner THOMPSON in FERGUSON'S house at Malone; he saw him at the camp on the American side Thursday morning; THOMPSON was around with the men giving them orders and forming them into companies; some were in uniform; saw him at Malone afterward when he admitted having been in a fight; he told witness that the hat he got of him was not discreet; they traded hats before THOMPSON went to the front; was arrested yesterday by the Marshal on an order of the District-Attorney because he did not identify the prisoner; was in custody about twenty minutes.

A. H. MCLEOD—Saw THOMPSON with troops across the fines; saw them from the cupola of the mill; by red coats he means volunteers; the regulars at first fired regular volleys lasting about fifteen minutes; THOMPSON was in citizen's dress.

QUESTION FROM THE STARR JURY.

The jury in the Starr case came in again, and asked for the newspaper evidence. The Judge said it was not the usual practice, but by his order it was read to them by the District-Attorney, J. B. HAMILTON.

TESTIMONY RESUMED.

M. M. SMITH, Custom-house officer, at Trout River, saw the prisoner coming with men after the skirmish; saw men cross the line from Canada in a body in irregular order. The prisoner tried to stop the men and form them into line; failed to see it and threatened to shoot the first man that went over the line; had a pistol in his hand; saw a Fenian with gun in hand who said he would have one shot to see the effect; think it was THOMPSON; got no command to come here from the Government; don't suppose they know I am here.

ARGUMENT.

Judge PARKER asked the Court to decide that the only question as to the beginning and setting on foot that there is no evidence as to preparing and providing means.

Mr. DORSHEIMER suggested that he had personal arms and wagons immediately following him; he was also active in getting rations.

THE DEFENSE.

Judge PARKER then opened the case for the prisoner. He said he had a right to a fair trial as well as any one else, and even better where he had served his country as this man had, who joined the army as a sergeant, and rose step by step until brevetted Major. He was taken prisoner at Fredericksburg and lay in Libby three months. He was wounded at the battle of the Wilderness. A man of this kind was entitled to a liberal trial. He never was a member of the Fenian organization. Judge PARKER here offered proof of the prisoner never having been a member of the Fenian organization.

Mr. DORSHEIMER objected, and the objection was sustained.

TESTIMONY FOR THE DEFENSE.

HENRY SHULLER, of Albany, was called for the defense. Knew the prisoner in 1861; served with him.

Mr. DORSHEIMER objected to this evidence; that it was incompetent.

The WITNESS—Knew special acts of service; could speak of general character.

Judge PARKER wished to prove the prisoner served honorably in the army.

The question was put and ruled out.

The witness said he held the rank of Brevet-Major, and attempted to give evidence as to service, but was checked by the Court.

HENRY STEPHENS and JAMES WARD, of Albany, testified to the previous good character of the prisoner.

CLOSE OF THE DEFENSE.

The defense here closed their case, and Judge PARKER addressed the jury at considerable length and very eloquently, criticising the evidence had contending that the requirements of the statute were not complied with. He ridiculed the evidence of HOLBROOK, and alluded to the Fenian feeling in Great Britain, which he did not approve of. He spoke of the skirmish as having perhaps astonished the red coats; he ignored the raid, yet his blood boiled that this trial should be at the demand of the British Government. He would like to see that Government settle the Alabama claims and St. Albans raid claims. If any one was to be punished it should have been O'NEIL. It was strange those selected should have been those who had loyally served their country.

CLOSE FOR THE PROSECUTION.

Mr. DORSHEIMER addressed the Court in reply; admitted the prisoner had the right to a generous trial, and that he had got it. The Government had furnished as much money as he asked for to provide his witnesses. He continued in the same strain as in STARR's case. Speaking of the act, he said the spirit could be judged by the fact that it was the law of nations that prevented one nation fighting another. He said this was not stooping to English dictation; there was no intervention here either of England or Canada. It was an application which would force England to do her duty in the future. His Honor summed up, confining the jury to the real issues in hand.

THE VERDICT.

The jury was sworn and soon brought in a verdict of guilty on the first and third counts and not guilty on the other two counts, and recommended the prisoner to mercy in consideration of past services.

The prisoner's counsel asked sufficient delay to bring up the matter of law, or an arrest of judgment. He insisted that there should be two Judges, and that this Court was illegal.

The Court told him to consider before the jury was discharged.

The jury in STARR's case came in with a verdict of guilty on the first and third counts, with a recommendation of mercy.

The trial of MANNING begins to-morrow.

JAPAN AND CHINA.

Japanese Politics—The Markets—The Chinese Rebellion—Honors to the Memory of Anson Burlingame—A Gratuity for His Widow.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 13.—The steam-ship China, from Hong Kong June 11, and Yokohama June 22, arrived to-night.

JAPAN.

A Japanese conspiracy to fire the City of Osaka had been discovered, and numerous arrests of people implicated in the plot had been made....Several arrests had lately been made for forgery, one of which was the steward at the house of the British Minister....Doubts have been expressed whether the Japanese loan can be legally raised in the English market. The Oriental Bank refuses to accept any responsibility in regard to the transaction.... The principal Government officials are debating whether to assist the Coreans in expelling foreigners from Corea, and assisting that country as a dependency of Japan. A treaty of commerce would soon be made between Japan and Peru....At Yokohama, general business was flat. The tea market was firm. The advices of the new crop of silk were satisfactory. The export of silk-worms eggs was expected to fall short of the estimate on account of the ravages of disease. Some of the provinces near Yokohama will scarcely produce a card this year. The prices of new tea had advanced from $5 to $6 per picul.

CHINA.

The intelligence from the Province of Shansi, the seat of the rebellion in China, was unfavorable. Another imperial defeat was reported, after which a large number of the Imperialists deserted and joined the rebels. A nest of pirates had been discovered near Raffle Island, and dispersed. Permission had been granted by the Chinese Government to land a telegraph cable at Shanghai. The Chinese Government, for the purpose of paying a tribute to the memory of the late ANSON BURLINGAME, had issued a circular letter announcing his death, and had given 6,000 taels for the purpose of defraying the funeral expenses, and 10,000 taels to the widow for her own use. The survivors of the English gun-boat Slaney, had arrived at Hong Kong. The Russian troops had advanced to the town of Oorga, in Outer Mongolia.

The silk crop was estimated at 40,000 bales. The tea season had fairly opened at Hankow. Nearly all fine teas had been bought up at advanced prices. At Foo-cow the receipts of tea were 76,000 chests; the quality was inferior, and purchasers were cautious. At Canton the sales of tea amounted to 50,000 boxes, a slight reduction from the sales at same time last year.

A DUEL.

A Reporter and an Ex-French Officer Fight with Sabres.

ST. LOUIS, July 13.—A duel was fought, this afternoon, between Major HENRY KEITTLE, on the reportorial corps of the St. Louis Times, and Capt. L. D. VAN, who is said to have once served in the French army. The weapons were cavalry sabres. Major. KEITTLE received a slight wound on the forehead and a trifling cut on the hand. One of Capt. VAN'S eyes was put out by a thrust from a sabre. The whole affair is involved in mystery. The seconds are unknown, and the principals are extremely reticent. The fight is said to have grown out of some reflections cast on the fighting qualities of the Northern troops by Capt. VAN.

Fatal Railroad Accident in New-Hampshire—One Man Killed. One Fatally Wounded and Others Injured.

CONCORD, N. H., July 13.—A collision occurred, today, on the Northern Railroad, not far from this city, probably occasioned by some misunderstanding of telegrams between the conductors. The trains collided on a curve about a mile north of Canaan. The following casualties are reported: Charles W. Clark, of Concord, engineer on the down train, killed; Loring Badger, of New-Hampton, brakeman, fatally injured; A. M. Grant, engineer on the up train, injured; Thomas Gilmore, of West Lebanon, fireman, badly bruised about the head; Edward Work, of West Lebanon, fireman, thigh broken; Abiel Hurlburt, extra engineer on the engine with Mr. Clark, leg broken; C. T. Summers, of Cabot, Vt., badly injured about the head. Several passengers were slightly injured. No train has arrived from the place of accident.

Another Fight Among Philadelphia Firemen—Detalcation of a Wool Broker.

PHILADELPHIA, July 13.—This morning another disgraceful row occurred while some of the fire companies were returning from a fire at the corner of Twenty-third and Lombard streets. One of the participants was the Columbia Hose Company, and the other is supposed to have been the Shiffler Hose Company. Horns, spanners and knives were freely used, and a couple of members of the Columbian Hose Company were badly cut....THOMAS HILSEN, the head of the firm of HILSEN & CO., wool brokers, is reported as having disappeared with $60,000 belonging to the firm. The fact was discovered by a telegram from Boston, from BOND & CO., of which HILSON & CO. was a branch, stating that HILSON had gone to Europe in the steamer Syria with a large amount of money belonging to the house.

WASHINGTON.

The Tax and Tariff Bill Agreed Upon—The Apportionment—Reports on the Howard Investigation—Mr. Motley's Successor—Passage of the Funding Bill—No Agreement on the Georgia Bill—Successor to Gov. Ashley—Miscellaneous.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 13.—The Conference Committee on the Tax and Tariff bill cleaned up their work last night, and had their report ready for action at an early hour this afternoon. Gen. SCHENCK presented it in a brief speech, in which he stated that the total of reduction effected by the bill was between $75,000,000 and $80,000,000. Though the bill was not in all respects as he would have it, yet he thought the country had reason to rejoice that so much had been accomplished. Mr. BROOKS followed in a severe philippic against the tariff sections of the bill, and Mr. COX did the same. Gen. SCHENCK replied tersely, and when the yeas and nays were called the Democrats, with that singular fatality which never seems to desert them of late years, all save five went on the record against the whole bill. The five yeas were AXTEL, of California; BARNUM, of Connecticut; RICE and TRIMBLE, of Kentucky, and ROGERS, of Arkansas.

THE COLORED CADET.

Some of the young gentlemen at West Point who have been insulting and abusing Cadet SMITH on account of his color, will probably get out of that institution sooner than they hoped for, as Gen. BUTLER'S resolution authorizing the Board of Visitors to investigate the matter passed the House this morning. A few expulsions will probably set the affair at rest.

THE FINAL ADJOURNMENT.

It is noted to-night as almost without precedent, that the House should not be compelled to hold night sessions. The Senate has been so far behind that it has been obliged to hold regular evening sessions for the last two weeks; but even its business is well in hand, while the House has absolutely nothing to do but wait for the agreement of Conference Committees. This morning there were seven of these in hand, two of which—the Funding and Tax and Tariff—were made and agreed to in both Houses today. Those that remain are the Navy, Army, Indian, and Sundry Civil Appropriation bills and the Georgia bill. The report on Georgia is ready, and will be made in the morning. This will leave four Appropriation bills for final action before Friday at 12 o'clock. There is no reason why any should fail. The House will hold a night session to-morrow evening, in order to act on business as it comes from the Senate, as there will be nothing else to do. A sharp eye will have to be kept on the objective point of attack just now, to wit: the Speaker's table.

THE APPORTIONMENT BILL.

A resolute effort to suspend the rules and take up the Apportionment bill in the House this morning, not only did not get the requisite two-thirds vote, but not even a majority, the yeas being 94 and the nays 97. There was considerable feeling displayed by Western members, and some threats of objections to taking the Sundry Civil Appropriation bill up, unless the opposition yielded. But this was not pushed, though the disappointment of the Western States is very great. The opponents of the bill assert that it is an unnecessary and uncalled-for measure, pushed in the interest of section aggrandizement purely; that the Constitution says that the apportionment shall be made by Congress every ten years; that this bill proposes to do it through the Secretary of the Interior; and that only eight years have elapsed since the last apportionment was made. There now seems scarcely any chance for the bill at this session.

THE SOUTHERN PACIFIC.

The House seems to have set its face as flint against going to the Speaker's table for any purpose. The friends of the Southern Pacific Railroad made an effort to get their bill up today by suspending the rules; but, though led by Gen. SCHENCK, they did not even get a majority, the yeas being 75 and the nays 103. This shows that there is no chance in the House for any railroad grants during the few remaining hours of the session.

THE HOWARD INVESTIGATION.

The report of the Committee on Education and Labor in the investigation of Gen. HOWARD'S case, was made today. Two reports were made, one from the majority, vindicating Gen. HOWARD completely, and the other, signed by the minority of two Democrats, as completely inculpating him. The general impression seems to be that the investigation, so far as Gen. HOWARD is concerned, was, as indicated by the division of the Committee, a partisan proceeding, with a considerable degree of personal malice on the part of some persons.

THE MISSION TO ENGLAND.

The positive reports telegraphed to some of your contemporaries yesterday, that the nomination of Ex-Senator FRELINGHUYSEN was to be sent in today as successor to Mr. MOTLEY, were brought to grief today by the failure of the President to respond to the prophecies of the enterprising correspondents. Everybody would rejoice to see Mr. FRELINGHUYSEN placed in that position, however, though it is a matter of much doubt whether any appointment will be made for the present.

THE FUNDING BILL.

The Conference Committee on the Funding bill met promptly at an early hour this morning, and immediately agreed to strike out the seventh section, which required the new banks to take the new bonds; and on being reported back to the House the bill was promptly agreed to. The Democrats took the unpleasant recourse of going on the record against the measure, the yeas being 127 and the nays 55. Senator SHERMAN remarked, in presenting the report to the Senate, that he regretted that the bank sentiment had insisted on striking out this section, for he thought that the banks would thereby inflict a positive injury upon themselves. In evading their fair share of the great work of funding the debt, they would increase that public sentiment, already greatly prejudiced, which regards them as a dangerous monopoly; and in the end the effect would only be to add to the general clamor for the abrogation of the present system.

THE GEORGIA BILL.

The Conference Committee on the Georgia bill have utterly failed to agree, and today agreed to so report to their respective Houses. This destroys all prospect for the admission of Georgia this session, unless the Senate shall concur in the House bill, an effort to effect which will be made to-morrow. The disagreement was caused by Senator HAMLIN refusing to accept the House bill, which all the other Republican members favored. In this connection it is asserted to-night that the new Attorney-General, Mr. AKERMAN, has privately expressed the opinion that it would be both legal and proper for the President to order an election in Georgia this Fall, and that the President has given some thought to the propriety of such an order and may possibly formally ask the opinion of the Attorney-General thereon.

THE CUBA TELEGRAPH QUESTION.

The sub-committee of the House Committee on Commerce commenced, today, its investigation into the rates of toll charged by the International Ocean Telegraph Company between the United States and Cuba. Mr. FIELD, who wants their charter repealed instantly, was present, with several other parties interested on the same side, while Gen. W. F. SMITH and his counsel appeared for the International Company. The Committee soon found that their inquiry would go over more ground than could be covered this session, and decided to ask the House for authority to continue the investigation during the recess. Two attempts, however, made by Mr. INGERSOLL, Chairman of the Sub-committee, to get such a resolution passed this afternoon, failed, which looks as if the House was rather disgusted with the general subject of investigation. Mr. SCOFIELD strenuously objected, and he was thoroughly sustained.

THE KENTUCKY UNIVERSITY.

The Senate today passed a bill which has been some time pending, appropriating $50,000 to the Kentucky University for damage done to its buildings and property during its occupancy by United States troops in the late war.

A NEW RAILROAD BILL.

The Senate today passed, at the instance of Senator KELLOGG, a railroad bill, with the usual land-grant, running from New-Orleans, via Baton Rouge, to Marshall, Texas, where it connects with the projected Southern Pacific. There does not appear to be much chance for this bill to pass the House at the present session.

CONFIRMATIONS IN THE SENATE.

The Senate was in continuous Executive session from 2 o'clock this afternoon until 8 o'clock in the evening. Nearly all the time was occupied by the nomination of Judge BOND, of Baltimore, to the Judgeship of the Fourth Circuit, and of Mr. POTTS as Governor of Montana, in place of ASHLEY. After about two hours' discussion, BOND was confirmed by a decisive majority. Senators SUMNER, NYE, TIPTON, and MCDONALD, made earnest protests against the displacement of ASHLEY. Mr. SHERMAN spoke favorably of Mr. POTTS and urged his confirmation. The debate lasted four hours, at the end of which Mr. POTTS was confirmed; Mr. ASHLEY'S supporters only succeeding on the roll-call in mustering thirteen negative votes.

THE DEFICIENCY BILL.

The Deficiency bill was considered at the evening session, and after much tediousness of debate and many attempts to fasten upon it irrelevant amendments, was passed without any considerable increase in the total amount appropriated.

Dispatch to the Associated Press.

THE FUNDING BILL.

Text of the Act as Reported by the Conference Committee and Agreed to by Both Houses.

WASHINGTON, July 13.—The following is the Funding bill, as agreed on by the Committee of Conference and concurred in by both Houses to-day:

An Act to Authorize the Refunding of the National Debt.

Be it enacted, &c., That the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized to issue, in a sum or sums not exceeding in the aggregate two hundred millions of dollars, coupon or registered bonds of the United States, in such form as he may prescribe, and of denominations of fifty dollars, or some multiple of that sum, redeemable in coin of the present standard value, at the pleasure of the United States, after ten years from date of their issue, and bearing interest payable semi-annually in such coin at the rate of five per centum per annum; also, a sum or sums, not exceeding in the aggregate three hundred millions of dollars, of like bonds, the same in all respects, but payable at the pleasure of the United States after fifteen years from the date of their issue, and bearing interest at the rate of four and a half per centum per annum; also, a sum or sums not exceeding one thousand million dollars, of like bonds, the same in all respects, but payable at the pleasure of the United States after thirty years from the date of their issue, and bearing interest at the rate of four per centum per annum; all of which said several classes of bonds, and interest thereon, shall be exempt from the payment of all taxes or duties of the United States, as well as from taxation in any form, by or under State, municipal or local authority; and the said bonds shall have set forth and expressed upon their face the above specified conditions, and shall, with their coupons, be made payable at the Treasury of the United States. But nothing in this act, or in any other law now in force, shall be construed to authorize any increase whatever of the bonded debt of the United States.

SEC. 2. That the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized to sell and dispose of any of the bonds issued under this act, at not less than their par value for coin, and to apply the proceeds thereof to the redemption of any of the bonds of the United States outstanding and known as five-twenty bonds at their par value, or he may exchange the same for such five-twenty bonds par for par; but the bonds hereby authorized shall be used for no other purpose whatsoever. And in the exceeding one-half of one per centum of the bonds hereinbefore authorized, is hereby appropriated to pay the expense of preparing, issuing and disposing of the same.

SEC. 3. That the payment of any of the bonds hereby authorized after the expiration of the said several terms of ten, fifteen and thirty years, shall be made in amounts to be determined from time to time by the Secretary of the Treasury at his discretion; the bonds so to be paid to be distinguished and described by the dates and numbers, beginning with the oldest outstanding payment with the bonds last dated and numbered, of the time of which intended payment or redemption the Secretary of the Treasury shall give public notice; and the interest on the particular bonds so selected at any time to be paid shall cease at the expiration of three months from the date of such notice.

SEC. 4. That the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized, with any coin in the Treasury of the United States which he may deem best adapted to such purpose, or which may be derived from the sale of any of the bonds the issue or which is provided for in this act, to pay at par and cancel any six per centum bonds of the United States of the kind known as five-twenty bonds, which have become, or shall hereafter become, redeemable by the terms of their issue; but the particular bonds so to be paid and canceled shall in all cases be indicated and specified by class, date and number, in the order of their number and issue, beginning with the first numbered and issued. Public notice is to be given by the Secretary of the Treasury; and in three months after the date of such public notice, the interest on the bonds so selected and advertised shall cease.

SEC. 5. That the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized at any time within two years from the passage of this act, to receive gold coin of the United States on deposit for not less than thirty days in sums of not less than one hundred dollars, with the Treasurer or any Assistant Treasurer of the United States authorized by the Secretary of the Treasury to receive the same, who shall issue therefor certificates of deposits of like denominations as the Secretary of the Treasury shall prescribe, and said certificates of deposit shall bear interest at a rate not exceeding two and a half per centum per annum; and any amount of gold coin on hand may be deposited, may be withdrawn from deposit at any time after thirty days from the date of deposit and after ten days' notice, and on the return of said certificates, provided the interest on all such deposits shall cease and determine at the pleasure of the Secretary of the Treasury; and not less than twenty-five per centum of the coin deposited for or represented by said certificates of deposit shall be retained in the Treasury for the payment of said certificates; and if the excess beyond twenty-five per centum may be applied at the discretion of the Secretary of the Treasury to the payment or redemption of such outstanding bonds of the United States heretofore issued and known as the five-twenty bonds as he may designate under the provisions of the fourth section of this act, and any certificates of deposit issued as aforesaid may be received at par with the interest accrued thereon, in payment for any bonds authorized to be issued by this act.

SEC. 6. That the United States bonds purchased and now held in the Treasury, in accordance with the provisions relating to a sinking fund of section five of the act entitled "an act to authorize the issue of United States notes, and for the redemption or funding thereof, and for funding the floating debt of the United States." Approved Feb. 25, 1862, and all other United States bonds which have been purchased by the Secretary of the Treasury with the surplus funds in the Treasury, and now held in the Treasury of the United States, shall be canceled and destroyed; a detailed record of such bonds so canceled and destroyed, to be first made in the books of the Treasury Department. Any bonds hereafter applied to the said Sinking Fund, and all other United States bonds redeemed or paid hereafter by the United States, shall also, in like manner be recorded, canceled and destroyed, and the amount of the bonds of each class that have been canceled and destroyed shall be deducted respectively from the amount of each class of the outstanding debt of the United States. In addition to other amounts that may be applied to the redemption or the payment of the public debt, an amount equal to the interest on all the bonds belonging to the aforesaid Sinking Fund shall be applied as the Secretary of the Treasury shall from time to time direct to the payment of the public debt, as provided for in section five of the act aforesaid, and the amount so to be applied is hereby appropriated annually for that purpose out of the receipts for duties on imported goods.

THE TAX AND TARIFF BILL.

Some of the Leading Provisions of the Act.

WASHINGTON, July 13.—The conference report on the Tax and Tariff bill, having been agreed to by both Houses, awaits the President's signature to become a law. Some of the features of it are as follows:

TAXES REPEALED.

On and after the 1st of May, 1871, the special taxes imposed by the nineteenth section of the Internal Revenue act, approved June 30, 1864, and as amended by subsequent acts, are to be repealed; but this act shall not be held to repeal or in any way affect the special taxes imposed by the act of 1868, imposing taxes on distilled spirits and tobacco, and for other purposes, or the acts amendatory thereof.

On and after the 1st day of October next the several taxes on sales, saving and excepting such taxes on sales as are by existing laws paid by stamps, and the taxes on sales of leaf tobacco, manufactured tobacco, snuff, cigars, foreign and domestic; distilled spirits and wines, imposed by said act, approved July 6, and the acts amendatory thereof, be and the same are hereby repealed.

On and after Oct. 1, next, the stamp tax imposed in "Schedule B" on promissory notes for a less sum than $100, and on receipts for any sum of money or for payment of any debt, and the stamp tax imposed in "Schedule C" on canned and preserved fish, be and the same are hereby repealed. And no stamp shall be required upon the transfer or assignment of a mortgage where it or the instrument it secures has once been duly stamped. And the proprietor or proprietors named in "Schedule C," who shall furnish his or their own die or design for stamps to be used especially for his or their own proprietary articles shall be allowed the following commissions, namely: On amounts purchased at one time of not less than $50 nor more than $500, five per centum, and on amounts over $500, ten per centum on the whole amount purchased. Provided that incifer or friction matches may be removed from the place of manufacture for export to a foreign country without the payment of the tax or the affixing of stamps thereto, under such rules and regulations as the Commissioner of Internal Revenue may prescribe; and all provisions of existing laws inconsistent herewith are repealed.

On and after the 1st day of October next, the taxes imposed by the Internal Revenue laws now in force herein specified by the name, are hereby repealed, namely: On articles in "Schedule A," the special tax on boats, barges and flats, on legacies and successions, on passports and on gross receipts.

INCOME TAX.

There shall be levied and collected annually, as hereafter provided, for the years 1870 and 1871, and no longer, 5 per centum upon the gains, profits and income of every person residing in the United States, and of any citizen of the United States residing abroad, derived from any source whatever, whether within or without the United States, except as hereafter provided; and a like tax annually upon the gains, profits and income derived from any business, trade or profession carried on in the United States by any person residing without the United States, and not a citizen thereof, or from rents of real estate within the United States, owned by any person residing without the United States and not a citizen thereof, there is an exemption of $2,000, and also the amount paid for rent of dw

EUROPEAN MAIL NEWS.

ARRIVAL OF THE STEAM-SHIP JAVA.

The steam-ship Java, from Liverpool July 2 and Queenstown July 3, arrived at this port yesterday. She brings two days later news than that brought by the City of Brussels.

An action for alleged infringement of the Waverley copyright has been raised in the Court of Sessions by Messrs. ADAM and CHARLES BLACK, of Edinburgh, against Messrs. MURRAY & SON. Damages are laid at £2,000.

JOHN SAFFORD FISKE, the American Consul at Leith, says the Pall Mall Gazette, July 1, who is committed for trial in the Boulton and Park case, was yesterday admitted to bail, the Treasury being satisfied with the surety proposed.

A letter received by a well-know London physician, from a member of the family of Prof. LIEBIG, dated from Munich on the 26th ult., gives a favorable account of the great chemist's recovery. Prof. LIEBIG'S health continues to improve daily.

A telegraphic dispatch from the Hague to Galignani's Messenger, July 2, states that the interment of BARBES took place there on Wednesday morning. No religious ceremony was performed, but speeches were delivered by MM. LOUIS BLANC, MARTIN BERNARD and GAMBON, and by M. VANZORST, a Dutchman. About 500 persons were present.

The Bombay Gazette states that a proposition has been thrown out in Ceylon that all the European inhabitants of the East should subscribe to a testimonial to M. DE LESSEPS. The Bombay Gazette heartily approves of the suggestion, and hopes that it will be energetically carried out. "We cannot believe," it adds, "that any mercantile body from Bombay to Shanghai will fail to add their quota toward a gift from the East to FERDINAND DE LESSEPS."

By a Roman Catholic authority we are informed, says the London Daily News, July 2, that Cardinal ANTONELLI has just married one of his nephews to a Spanish lady of fortune, and has proved himself equal to the occasion by bestowing on the happy pair the sum of 5,000,000 francs, or £200,000 sterling.

A paragraph is going the round of the French and English papers, says the Pall Mall Gazette, announcing that, according to a telegram from San Francisco, a son of Count BISMARCK, serving in the Prussian navy, on board the Danube, has committed suicide. This is quite incorrect. Count BISMARCK has no son in the Prussian navy, and the Danube is an Austrian not a Prussian vessel. One of Count BEUST'S sons died a short time ago, and hence, probably, the origin of the rumor.

The continued absence of rain, says the London Times, July 2, is causing extreme inconvenience in many parts of France, besides inflicting serious loss to the farmers and graziers. The Crown forests have for the most part been thrown open to the farmers, in order that their cattle and sheep may obtain what little feed can be found there. In Paris, it is feared, the water supply may be seriously affected, and notices have been issued urging the greatest economy, and threatening a discontinuance of the supply in cases where wanton waste is proved. It is said that the river Loire has never been so low within the memory of man as it is at the present time. Sand-banks appear in all parts, and navigation has become almost impossible. On Sunday last the steamer from Nantes could not ascend higher than Angers.

A telegram from Queenstown of July 1, to the English papers, says: "The Cambria, Mr. ASHBURY'S yacht, and the Dauntless, Mr. BENNETT'S yacht, are lying in Queenstown Harbor ready for the Atlantic race. They will be towed out by the Old Head of Kinsale on Monday morning, and start at 2 P. M. The Dauntless sprung her foremast in coming round from Cowes close to the deck. The damage, however, was not serious, and will not interfere with her starting, as the mast has been securely fished above and below the wedges. The passengers on board the Cambria, besides the owner, will be Col. WILLIAMS, Messrs. A. B. COOKE, DIXON KEMP and J. COLE. On board the Dauntless, the owner, Mr. LAWRENCE JEROME, and Mr. CHARLES LONGFELLOW, son of the poet. The Sappho will leave for New-York on Thursday next."

During the whole of Thursday, (says the London Daily News, July 2,) up to an early hour yesterday morning, great excitement prevailed at Womwell, near Barnsley, owing to an accident which took place at the Deerfield Main Colliery, by which the whole of the men, 300 in number, were confined in the pit for upward of seventeen hours. It appeared that about 9 o'clock on Thursday morning the cages in the colliery came into collision in the shaft, so that no person could ascend or descend. On some of the men at the top going down to where the obstruction took place, they found the chair broken, and the conductors smashed to pieces to the extent of some twenty or thirty yards. A number of them were at once set to work to clear the obstruction, but it was not until about 10 o'clock at night that the broken cages were removed and a new one got ready, when the men were safely drawn to the top, a distance of 335 yards from the bottom.

Four men were suffocated in a gas-tube at the North Staffordshire Coal and Iron Company's Works, Talke, Staffordshire, July 1. The tube, which is fifty yards long and five feet in diameter, is used to convey waste gas from the blast furnaces to heat the furnace boilers. The works were stopped on that morning for the purpose of clearing out the tube, and only some trifling repairs remained to be done before the commencement of work. Three of the men, one of them being the manager and the other his assistants, went into the tube to do these repairs, and when they had remained there an unusually long time the fourth man followed to look after them. On his failing to return, a more careful search was made. The three men who first entered were found dead near the middle of the tube, and the other was lying dead at about six yards from the entrance. All appeared to have died instantly, and without the least struggle. There was more gas in the tube than was supposed, and the manager had neglected to have it all removed.

The Liverpool papers of July 2 say the Cunard steamer Scotia, Capt. C. H. E. JUDKINS, on her last voyage from New-York, eclipsed all her former achievements. She left New-York at 0:23 P. M. on the 22d June, passed Sandy Hook at 1:35, and at 2 P. M. discharged her pilot. At 3:36 P. M. on the 30th she passed the Fastnet Rock, at 7:20 arrived at Queenstown, at 8:27 left Queenstown, at 11:46 on July 1 passed the Bell Buoy, and at 0:24 arrived at Liverpool. Her apparent time is nine days and one minute, but allowing four hours and fifty-six minutes for difference of time between New-York and Liverpool, her actual time, including detention at Queenstown, is eight days, nineteen hours and five minutes.

The Independente, of Bologna, states that seven ancient tombs have been discovered in the cemetery of the Chartreuse nuns. In the first was found a small vase ornamented with human figures, a cup, and a small pot; in the second and third, fragments of bones, fibulæ decorated with pearls, vases, cups, and a bronze mirror; in the fourth and fifth were some handsome black vases intact; in the sixth, a cup, a goblet, and a vase with figures in relief; the seventh, which was larger and more richly ornamented than the rest, contained a skeleton around which were ranged a large number of small vessels, a cup, a tall vase with figures, a bronze candelabre more than three feet high, surmounted with a statuette, besides other objects.

AFFAIRS IN FRANCE.

The Military Contingent—Important Speech of M. Thiers—Disarmament Impossible—The Drouth in France—Reports and Statistics—Hints to Western Farmers—Theatrical Gossip—Grau and His New Star—Departure of M. Prevost Paradol.

From Our Own Correspondent.

PARIS, Friday, July 1, 1870.

The debate in the Corps Legislatif on the law calling out ninety thousand men of the class of 1870 brought out M. THIERS yesterday. His speech has created a profound feeling of dissatisfaction among those who are favorable to the project of disarmament. He not only tells us that France is not in a position to reduce her present enormous military expenditure, but that there is not the slightest hope of her being able to do so. The present standing army, which is daily adding to the public burdens, while at the same time it is paralyzing agriculture, is, according to him, only "an army of peace." It does not depend on France to induce the Great Powers to disarm. For Prussia to do so it will not suffice for her to send back to their homes a greater or less number of soldiers. She must first break up the Confederation of the North and renounce the treaties which she has made with Wurtemburg, Bavaria, and the other German States, and this sort of disarmament, the only serious one, she will never consent to. "When you speak of disarmament," said M. THIERS, "you speak of a chimera; disarmament is impossible in Europe for this simple reason: that all the armies in Europe are on a peace footing at the moment at which I speak, and that certain Powers have changed their territory, their population, their armies, and their situation entirely." He then went on to say that so far from advocating a reduction of the military contingent, he would, if he dared, propose a return to the law of 1831, with the contingent of one hundred thousand men. They might rest persuaded that they had scarcely the number necessary in ninety thousand men. Unfortunately, there is but too much truth in these statements, and all the arguments of the Opposition did not suffice to weaken the conviction of the Chamber as to the correctness of M. THIERS' views. The proposed substitution of a citizen force for a standing army in the circumstances in which France and Europe are placed, is one of those rhetorical expedients which can only be resorted to as a weapon of attack. As M. THIERS showed by reference to the war of secession in the United States, the adoption of such a system of armament in Europe would only serve to prolong the duration of war and its miseries.

THE AFFAIR OF THE INTERNATIONAL.

The trial of the members of the International is being proceeded with before the Tribunal Correctionnel of the Seine. Its developments are exciting the liveliest interest. Yesterday, CHALLAN, one of the accused, spoke at length in defense of himself and his fellow prisoners. After a rapid exposition of the principles of the association, he declared that it embraced in its ranks a large proportion of the working classes of the old and new worlds. As a warning to rulers, he stated that the adhesions, up to the last prosecutions in Austria and France against its members, had been limited, but that since then they were progressing at the rate of several thousand a day. He repudiated energetically the idea of any intervention on the part of the Society in the trade strikes of Europe. The policy of the association had no other aim than the establishment everywhere of the Republic, Democratic and social, but at the same time confining itself to no particular system of socialism. He protested against the doctrine of the forcible division of property being attributed to the Society as a principle of action, and expressed his surprise that such an accusation should be brought against those who supported almost the entire burden of taxation, and who sustained by their toil and suffering the armies and lyceums which profited only the upper and middle classes. In conclusion, he denounced free trade, the only use of which, in his opinion, was to arm the bourgeoisie against the working classes. The speech is calculated to make a profound impression among the latter. What a mistake on the part of the Government to afford the Republicans such opportunities of disseminating their ideas!

THE DROUTH—THE FOOD QUESTION.

The question of the most absorbing interest for France just at present, and, relatively, for the United States, is that of the food supply of this country for the next couple of years. In a former letter I stated to you my conviction that the apprehensions inspired by the continued absence of rain were but too well-founded, and that we should be compelled to draw largely on the resources of America for our supply of cereals for some time to come. Since then some of the Government organs here have been publishing statements which have been written purposely to allay the alarm existing in the public mind on the subject, but which in presence of the facts transpiring through the other journals, have but imperfectly effected their object. It is so important that the American Press, particularly that of the West, should be kept accurately informed as to the facts, that I devote the principal portion of my letter to this subject. Let me premise by stating that the persons sent to the Provinces by the Government to collect information as to the prospects of the harvest, went merely to those Departments in which agriculture has been brought to its highest state of perfection, and in which artificial means are successfully employed to supply the absence of rain. Of course the statements gleaned from such sources favor the optimist view, which it is the interest of the Government to take, of a very discouraging state of things. To get at the truth, we must not be satisfied with the calculations of a Minister of Agriculture, who can claim indulgence for his errors of calculation on the ground of the difficulty of arriving at an approximative estimate of the results of growing crops. It is better to take one's facts from sources the impartiality of which are above suspicion, and which, moreover, are corroborated by facts which cannot be disputed. Acting on this principle, I purpose calling the attention of your readers to a report prepared by a gentleman who was dispatched to the Provinces to collect information on this important subject, by one of the leading Paris journals, and for whose trustworthiness, as I happen to know him personally, I am in a position to vouch. This gentleman has just returned from a tour in the Departments of the North and East and also Belgium, and he reports the following as the results of inquiries made with care and in the best informed quarters. He says:

"Rain fell in the whole of the above mentioned region from the 24th to the 27th of last month (June.) It also favored the entire of Germany. It did a great deal of good to the crops in the ground, which present in the northern part of Europe a better aspect than in the center and west of France. There will be more corn than was anticipated a week back, but the supply will, nevertheless, be far from sufficient. As regards the food crops for cattle, they are almost entirely lost. The drouth has been too prolonged for the rain arriving now to offer the cultivator the means of repairing the enormous losses which he has sustained. In the month of June, in Paris, there fell but a very small quantity of rain on the 1st and the 6th. It did not exceed one millimetre in height. In average years in Paris there are usually in the month of June thirteen days of rain, which give a height of fifty millimetres of water. The month of May had already been exceptionally dry, although in a somewhat less proportion than that of June. In fact, there fell, during a period of eight days, a quantity which attained one height of thirty-five millimetres; while in average years there are usually twelve days of rain, yielding a height of fifty-two millimetres. It was toward the end of April and the commencement of May that the unfavorable state of the weather began to cause uneasiness. There had already been complaints of the dryness of the soil in March and April. Thus, while in the month of April in ordinary years there falls, in Paris, thirty-seven millimetres of water in twelve hours, we had this year only four millimetres of rain in five days, and in March, there only fell a height of fourteen millimetres, in place of thirty-four. [The millimetre, I should state for the information of the untraveled portion of your readers, is the thousandth part of a metre, and the metre itself is 3 feet 3.37 inches.] Besides this large decrease in the usual supply of rain, there was a considerable reduction in the average height of the temperature, accompanied by numerous frosts, which affected more or less the various crops toward the end of April and the beginning of May. To sum up, during the four months of March, April, May and June, to have in Paris an average year, there should have fallen a height of 173 millimetres of rain, while we had only fifty-five millimetres, that is to say, less than a third, and the quantity that fell was spread over thirty instead of forty-nine days. If, on the other hand, we take into account that the atmosphere, always very dry, exacted on the part of the plants a more abundant evaporation, it will be understood how it happened that it was only in lands well-manured and well-cultivated, where the roots of the plants could seek at a depth the juices necessary to their keep and growth, that vegetation was able to maintain itself in a satisfactory manner. Thence originated the languishing condition of the various crops in districts in which, as in Paris, the rain was at once infrequent and small in quantity on lands light in soil, badly manured and cultivated to but a small depth."

In France, it should be stated, that, notwithstanding the considerable progress made in agriculture during the last thirty years, good farmers are still the exception. The writer to whom I refer adds that after having traversed vast plains over an immense extent of country, he found that even on the lands of these latter the aspect of the vegetation was notably inferior to that which it presents in ordinary years. It is always difficult to estimate in an absolute manner the value of a crop until it is stored. All that is positively known at present is the deficit of more than half which has been ascertained in the hay crop, which has been almost entirely gathered in. The dearth is so great that 100 bundles of hay, (500 kilogrammes, or 1,000 pounds weight,) which at the same period last year cost only from 47 to 57 francs, according to the quality, fetch now from 101 to 125 francs. Luzerne was last year from 44 to 56 francs, this year it is from 99 to 119 francs, or more than double. As regards straw, the increase is somewhat less, but the price already exceeds 48 francs. These figures will prove to you how costly it has become for the farmer to raise and feed cattle. The smaller cultivators are accordingly taking them to market and offering them at low prices, at which they frequently cannot find purchasers. The appearance of the animals explains this. They are thin, the skin hangs loosely on the bones, and they require an abundance of succulent food to restore them to condition. There are but few farmers in a position to undertake this task. Hence the depreciation which has taken place in the price of all domestic animals. Although the temperature is considerably reduced in Paris, and the nights are even cold, there is no indication that we are near rain. The waters of the rivers throughout France are lower than they have been within the memory of the oldest persons living. In the Loire sand-banks are visible, which had never before made their appearance above water. The navigation has in many places become impracticable. On Sunday last, the steamer plying from Nantes to Angers was unable to reach its destination. These facts will be more convincing to our grain-growers in the West than the sanguine assertions of the French Government organs. It is to the interest of the latter to put the best possible face on things, but it is not the less certain that there will be an unusually heavy demand this year and next for our cereals—a demand which will go far to restore activity to our languishing commerce, and to lighten its burdens.

ANOTHER WEDDING IN THE AMERICAN COLONY.

The marriage of Miss ELEONORE LORILLARD SPENCER, of New-York, to Prince VIRGINIUS VICOVORO COMTE BOLOGNETTI CENCI, a descendant of the branch of the noble Italian family to which the celebrated BEATRICE belonged, has been the event of the week in the colony. The ceremony was celebrated first at the American Legation, and afterward at the American Episcopal Chapel. Are we to infer from the omission of the Catholic rites, that the Prince has accepted the creed as well as the hand of Miss SPENCER?

THEATRICAL.

GRAU returned here from Germany yesterday, after completing his theatrical arrangements for the Fall season in New-York. When he arrived here some months ago he had no definite idea of what his plans would be. On one point he had made up his mind—that unless he could secure some powerful attraction in either the musical or dramatic line, he would import nothing. He accordingly addressed himself to RUBENSTEIN, the greatest of living pianists, but the maestro though liking very well the idea of making a trip to America, declined an engagement, as he has decided on abandoning the concert-room and devoting himself to the composition of opera. NILSSON he could not have, as she was already engaged to MAURICE STRAKOSCH for the States; and as to opera bouffe, he had arrived at the conviction that it would never be a paying institution in America. There therefore remained for him but one chance—a similar one to that by which he had made such a lucky hit some years before, and he accordingly hurried off to Berlin to make proposals to the great German tragedienne, Mme. MARIE SEEBACH. On arriving there he found that she had gone to Frankfort, and at once wrote to her to offer her an engagement. The terms which she named in her reply were so high—higher than those of RISTORI—that he despaired of being able to secure her. He resolved, however, not to abandon the hope of engaging her until he had a personal interview, and the result justified him in saying, with the great Roman, Veni vidi vici. Mme. SEEBACH no sooner saw him than she surrendered, and the contract was signed on the 7th of May. The lady whom Mr. GRAU takes back with him as the great theatrical star of the approaching season, has won high honors on the German stage. She is to Germany what RISTORI is to Italy; what RACHEL was to France, and SIDDONS to England. Her success in Vienna, Berlin and St. Petersburg has been equally great, and has obtained for her royal favors. Her great parts are Marguerite, in "Faust," Marie Stuart, Desdemona, Juliette, and Louise, in "Love and Intrigue." She plays, however, in about twenty other rôles in which she is nearly as successful. LUCCA, ARTOT, NILSSON, MALLINGER and Mme. CARVALHO went to see her, to study her Marguerite, which is perhaps her best character, and all profited by the observation of her great qualities. Mme. SEEBACH is about thirty-three years old, and is not unlike Mme. LAGRANGE in appearance. In play of features and expressiveness of action she is unrivaled.

DEPARTURE OF M. PREVOST PARADOL.

Last night the new Minister to Washington left Paris, by the midnight train, for Havre, from whence he sails, to-morrow, by the Holsatia. He was accompanied to the station by a large concourse of friends, among whom were a great many journalists.

GREAT BRITAIN.

The Late Lord Clarendon—Dispatch from Secretary Fish—Cause of Death.

From the London Daily News, July 2.

On hearing of Lord CLARENDON'S death, Mr. FISH sent to Mr, MOTLEY the following telegram:

WASHINGTON, June 27.—The death of the Earl of CLARENDON removes a statesman whose fame belongs to the world, and whose loss will be felt by other nations than that in whose behalf he labored for the advance of civilization and in the interests of peace. The President tenders the sympathy of the people of the United States to Her Majesty and to the British people, and condolence to those to whom the loss brings personal grief."

The Lancet says the immediate cause of his Lordship's death was diarrhœa, which continued for several days before he was seen by his usual attendant, Dr. BABER. His Lordship could not be prevailed upon to give up his official duties, insomuch that when, on the evening of Saturday, the 25th ult., Dr. C. J. B. WILLIAMS was summoned in consultation, he was found, though very weak, still sitting up in bed, with several dispatch boxes before him. At 4 P. M. on Sunday, the treatment had proved so beneficial that Dr. GULL, who then joined in consultation, entertained good hopes of his recovery. At midnight, however, Dr. WILLIAMS was summoned, and found his Lordship in a sinking state, from which the free administration of stimulants failed to rouse him, till death supervened soon after 6 in the morning. Lord CLARENDON had suffered for many years from gout, occurring internally and at the joints, in periodical paroxysms. The action of the heart was feeble, and the pulse slow. He retained consciousness till within three hours of his decease.

Emigration of Pauper Children—A Paper by Miss Rye on the Subject.

From the London Times, July 2.

Miss RYE recently read a paper in the rooms of the National Association for the Promotion of Social Science, at a meeting presided over by Lord SHAFTESBURY, in explanation of her project for finding homes in America for pauper girls. In our district schools, Miss RYE said, there was accommodation for not more than about 3,900 children, while, according to last quarter's returns, it appeared that there were no less than 10,000 children in London alone receiving indoor relief, and certainly more than 46,000 children in the receipt of out-door relief. The want of working women in British North America and in the United States generally was one of the most serious wants of the country. Those who were getting on well in life would not allow their children to go into service, and probably not 600 single women fit for domestic service emigrated to America in the course of one year. It was, however, possible to find a place for adult pauper women but very rarely, and then only by exercising a wise discretion in the choice of the emigrants. An idle, dirty, ignorant woman was not to be made industrious and taught to cook a dinner or clean a house by simply transporting her across the Atlantic. The colonists would not have such persons, and had told us so officially and in other ways. But experience had shown Miss RYE that in Canada something could be done with the raw material. In the excellent orphanages at Toronto and Hamilton a child who had lost both parents was invariably placed under indentures with respectable persons living in the country. A similar system had been carried out with great success by Mr. VAN MESTER, once a Baptist minister living in Ohio, now the active agent of the Howard Mission for Little Children in New-York. A knowledge of these circumstances had led her to the conclusion that the plan was applicable in this country. The question of expense, however, had to be considered. Now, if the children were sent from the unions in good health and with a small outfit to Liverpool, and if she were permitted to carry out the work on a large scale, and relieved of anxious care about the support of the Distributory House in Niagara, she would be able to take the children out for £10 per head. The position of the children would be materially improved by their removal from the overcrowded poor-houses, and the rates would be lessened, for the cost of one year's maintenance in the following district schools was as follows: In the South Metropolitan, £18 15s.; North Surrey, £16 2s.; Reading, £12 4s.; South-East Shropshire, £13 10s.; and the Central London School, in which there were above 1,300 children, £26 per head. Thanks to the liberality of the public, she had been enabled to purchase a house and two acres of ground at Niagara, Canada West, a healthy place, and a good distributory locality for her purposes. There 100 children could be comfortably maintained until suitable persons applied for them. In all cases great care was exercised in the choice of homes for the girls, and in the majority of instances they were placed with families who had been settled on their own freehold estates for twenty, thirty or forty years. There were now two hundred respectable persons in Canada, each ready to take charge of a child. The girls were bound until they were eighteen years of age, it being considered fair that those who had been at the expense of rearing them in their tender years should reap some advantage when they were able to perform some real services. It was, however, stipulated that the girls should receive in money wages $3 a month from their fifteenth to their seventeenth year, and $4 per month from seventeen to eighteen years of age. Provision had also been made for the religious instruction and education of the children, Mr. PAFFORD, Mayor of Niagara, and Mr. ROBERT BALL, a Justice of the Peace for the district, acting conjointly with Miss RYE as guardians. With regard to the inspection of children who had been placed out, she would suggest that annual certificates might be sent by a clergyman nearest to the child's new home. In all cases the children to be taken out must be between the ages of 6 and 12, and women from 18 to 35. Sending out a pauper girl of from 13 to 17 years of age would be devoting her to destruction, for she would have neither the loving obedience of the child nor the experience of a woman.

Singular Will Case in Edinburgh—Deceased Pronounced "A Bit of a Gowk" by his Brother, a British Admiral.

From the Pall Mall Gazette, July 1.

The Court of Session at Edinburgh has just concluded the trial of a will case which occupied six days, and excited considerable interest. The action was brought to set aside the will of the late Mr. W. MAXWELL STEWART, of Lochnagar, brother of Admiral Sir HOUSTON STEWART, on the ground that the deceased when he made the will was of unsound mind. A sum of about £30,000 was involved in the case. The Glasgow Herald, in a summary of the contents of the will and the evidence given at the trial, says: A sum of £100 was left to the Sheriff of Renfrewshire, and he was to be allowed, "in addition, his expenses at an hotel in Greenock for breakfast, dinner, a bottle of wine, and for tea, supper and bedroom, and the usual allowance for servants." All the young women of seventeen years of age on the lands of Carnoch were to receive a certain sum. The estate of Lochnagar, in New-South Wales, was to be applied to the encouragement of Scotch music, especially reels and strathspeys, and particularly the reels and strathspeys and the music published by NEIL GOW & SONS. A professor of Scotch music, healthy, able in body and mind, was to be appointed at a moderate salary to teach the violin and the music of the firm aforesaid, and it was stipulated that he should reside in the parish of Inverkip and be a member of the Established Church. Then the Sunday-scholars of the same favored region were to be provided every Sunday, after lessons, with as much white bread and butter as they could eat and as much tea as they could drink, and were, besides, to be supplied with a tea-service, knives and forks of ivory handles—the tea-service bearing the name of WILLIAM MAXWELL STEWART, J. P., and C. S. for Renfrewshire. "Lochnagar's" history, as told at the trial, fully explained the eccentricity of his will. His brother, Admiral Sir HOUSTON STEWART, said he was "always a bit of a gowk." "Fifelandish," "had a bee in his bonnet." His parents could not shut their eyes to this fact as he grew up; and his father, after full deliberation, placed his property under trustees. He was put to sea under the care of his brother; but he only remained a fortnight. He did no better in the army, for he got into scrapes, and on being advised by his Colonel to go home he took the advice and retired. He was tried in a commercial establishment and failed, and afterward went out to New-South Wales with Sir THOMAS BRISBANE, where he acquired the property of Lochnagar, of which he was vastly proud, and which in his will he devoted to the encouragement of his dearly-loved reels and strathspeys. After returning to Scotland, Mr. STEWART took offense at his family on account of the disposal of his property, and left Ardgowan to roam about the country, playing his fiddle, airing his singing-birds, and practicing all the habits of the miser. In Cornhill, where he stayed for some time, he was known as "Daft Lochnagar," and he was particularly anxious to be allowed by the farmers "to trim the turnips and kiss the servants." His habit was to throw open all the windows on Sunday morning, and play his fiddle while the people passed to church. He was a tall man, and in these early bachelor days dressed peculiarly, though with picturesque effect. Later in life you would have taken him," as his brother says, "for a rat-catcher;" his clothes were greasy, and offensive effluvia came from them; but on one or two occasions when he sat upon the bench as a Justice of the Peace he dressed for the occasion. He traveled in his own machine, carrying with him his cooking utensils, his larder, his birds and his fiddle, and, when he settled down for a few weeks, selected lodgings of the cheapest kind, where he could have all his own way. It was one of his crazes that his life was in danger from poison, and hence he would let nobody cook his food, except, perhaps, prepare an egg, into which he believed poison could not be inserted. Another delusion of the entertainer was that he was entitled to the Victoria Cross as a reward for his services, and he had written a large number of petitions setting forth his claims for the honor. But, with all this singular unsoundness of intellect, he was not to be cheated in making a bargain. He would allow no innkeeper to overcharge him, and he bought and managed two small estates with perplexing shrewdness in one otherwise so manifestly deranged. His fortune at his father's death was £10,000, and this he contrived to more than double by his penurious saving and management. The verdict of the jury was given unanimously for the pursuers in the action, and the will was set aside.

The Approaching Christian Conference in New-York—Meeting in London—Half-Fares by the Inman Line.

From the London Times, July 2.

A meeting in support of the project for holding a general conference of the Christians of all nations in New-York, in September next, was held on Thursday afternoon in the Liverpool Town-hall. The attendance, though not very large, was influential, including a number of the clergy and ministers of other Protestant denominations. The Mayor of Liverpool (Alderman HUBBACK) presided, and in opening the proceedings referred to the important meeting for the same object recently held in the Mansion-house, London. He said it would have been unbecoming on the part of Liverpool to be behind-hand in a movement of this kind, seeing that their relations with America were more intimate and important than even those of the metropolis. Rev. THOMAS NOLAN, vicar of St. Peter's, Regent-street, London, who attended as a deputation from the British Committee, said that although the invitation to attend the contemplated gathering came from the Evangelical Alliance in America, the acceptance of it would not commit any one to the specific principles of the Alliance. That the Conference would be a great success was already abundantly evident from the numbers and influential character of those who had expressed their intention to attend it and given in their adhesion to its object. Their friends in America were making extensive preparations for the purpose of showing a hospitable welcome to those who might visit them, and it was thought that the present juncture, when Bible Protestant religion was assailed from various quarters, was a peculiarly appropriate one for the proposed assemblage of Christians. Mr. NOLAN dwelt upon the important effect which such a conference might be expected to have in promoting international harmony and good will, and, in referring to the facilities for attending it, mentioned the great obligation under which Mr. W. INMAN had placed the Evangelical Alliance by offering to persons desiring to be present return tickets to the States at little more than half the usual fare, and available till the 1st of October, 1871. Mr. J. CROPPER proposed a resolution expressing interest in and approval of the objects contemplated by the Conference. Mr. GLAZEBROOK seconded the motion, which was carried unanimously. A vote of thanks to the Mayor for presiding concluded the proceedings.

CAPT. EYRE'S CASE.

His Appeal to the Board of Trade—Their Decision—His Punishment Not Severe Enough.

From the London Times, July 2.

Further correspondence has been had upon the subject of the collision between the United States corvette Oneida and the steam-ship Bombay. In a letter addressed by the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company to the Board of Trade, dated the 13th of May, the directors refer to the Board's condemnation of Capt. EYRE'S conduct after the collision, and observe that it appears that in the opinion of the Board of Trade "the sentence of six months' suspension, so far from being too severe, is too lenient a punishment for the offense which he has committed;" while Capt. EYRE is himself told that he was "guilty of a gross breach of the thirty-third section of the Merchant Shipping act of 1862;" that this enactment "simply embodies the dictates of humanity," and that in disobeying it he has "been guilty not only of an offense created by statute, but of disregard of the natural duties which circumstances of danger such as that of the Oneida imposed on him." The Company say, "It would thus appear to have been decided by the Board of Trade that the important qualifications embodied in the clause of the act referred to do not tend to exonerate Capt. EYRE; that the fact that 'he was placed in a position of great difficulty and doubt,' which was recognized by the Court at Kanagawa, is not admitted, but that, on the other hand, it is assumed that he knew at the critical time that the Oneida was 'in danger,' that he also knew that he could render assistance without 'danger to his own ship and crew' and passengers, and that it was 'practicable' to render such assistance. From all these conclusions the directors must respectfully but emphatically express their entire dissent." They state that Capt. EYRE has prepared a detailed statement in his defense, in which they hope the Board of Trade may yet find ground for a modification of their opinions. On the 21st of May Capt. EYRE addressed to the Board of Trade a statement, commenting at some length upon the evidence given before the Naval Court at Yokohama, objecting to the conclusions drawn by the Board of Trade, and challenging further investigation and the fullest inquiry into the case. He maintains that neither he nor any one on board the Bombay thought, or had reason to think that life was in danger; he says that the Oneida did not stop, but held on her course straight away from the Bombay, with a strong wind and tide, and that by the time he had ascertained the condition of his own ship, the attempt to come up with the Oneida, so as to make inquiry and offer assistance, would have been fruitless; and he states that he watched for fifteen minutes and saw no signal or light of any kind. The Board of Trade reply in a letter of the 9d of June, in which they say: "If it could have been shown, in a case of such importance, that the evidence had not been fully or fairly taken by the Naval Court, or that facts subsequently brought to light materially affected the bearing of the evidence taken by the Court, the Board of Trade would no doubt have endeavored to do substantial justice in the matter; and they would certainly, in such a case, not have expressed an opinion of their own without giving full consideration to the facts thus brought to light. But it appears distinctly, both from your first memorial and from your present letter, that this is not the case. In neither of these have you alleged or intimated that there are any new facts in the case, and the grounds on which you now rely for further inquiry consist merely of extracts from evidence which was presented to the Court at Yokohama, and commented on by your advisor before that Court passed their sentence. This evidence was also fully considered by the Board of Trade before they came to the conclusion expressed in their letter of the 26th of April. Under these circumstances the Board of Trade see no reason either to depart from that conclusion or to suppose that it could be modified by any further investigation, and they must, therefore, decline to reopen the case."

THE LATE CHARLES DICKENS.

"Master Humphrey's Clock"—Where This Title Was Found—Mr. Dickens' Fortune.

The following appears in the London Daily News, July 2:

To the Editor of the Daily News:

SIR: In 1864, in the course of a tour, I arrived at the town of Barnard Castle, in the County of Durham, late on a Winter evening, and put up at the principal hotel, a large, old-fashioned structure, fronting the principal street. At breakfast the following morning I chanced to notice on the opposite side of the street a large clock face, with the name HUMPHREY surrounding it, most conspicuously exhibited in front of a watch and clock-maker's shop. "How odd," I exclaimed to a gentleman seated beside me, "here is Master HUMPHREY'S clock!" "Of course," said the gentleman, "and don't you know that DICKENS resided here for some weeks when he was collecting materials for his Nicholas Nickleby, and that he chose his title for his next work by observing that big clock-face from his window?" After breakfast, I stepped across to the watch-maker, and asked him whether I had been correctly informed respecting Mr. DICKENS and the clock. The worthy horologist entered into particulars. "My clock," said he, "suggested to Mr. DICKENS the title of his book of that name. I have a letter from him stating this, and a copy of the work, inscribed with his own hand. For some years we corresponded. I got acquainted with him just by his coming across from the hotel as you have done this morning, and his asking me to inform him about the state of the neighboring boarding-schools. Mr. HUMPHREY then entered into many particulars respecting the condition of these schools. Incidentally, he said, he had directed Mr. DICKENS and his friend "Phiz" to the school which the two travelers afterward rendered infamous by their pen and pencil; but it was, he said, by no means the worst of those institutions. The school-master had been very successful in obtaining pupils, and had become very tyrannical, and even insolent, to strangers. He received Mr. DICKENS and his companion with extreme hauteur, and did not so much as withdraw his eyes from the operation of penmaking during their interview. But "Phiz" sketched him on his nail, and reproduced him so exactly, that soon after the appearance of the novel the school fell off, and was ultimately deserted. Since that period the "Do-the-Boys" description of school had altogether ceased in the district. Mr. HUMPHREY explained how Mr. DICKENS' attention had been called to the subject. He much lauded Mr. DICKENS, and in that quiet, genial manner characteristic of an intelligent Englishman, I sincerely hope he still lives to read these lines. I am, &c.

CHARLES ROGERS, LL.D.

LEWISHAM, S. E., June 25.

The ample provision, says the London Spectator, which CHARLES DICKENS made for his family, consisted of £8,000, invested in public securities; half the value of the copyright of the great novelist's books, estimated at £20,000; his modest house at Gads Hill, together with its contents; and the interest in All the Year Round, bequeathed to his eldest son. Mr. DICKENS was at all times a munificent and free-handed man, and never made the attainment of wealth a first object.

BASE-BALL.

The Neptune of Easton, Penn., vs. The Resolute of Elizabeth, N. J.

Yesterday the Neptune Club of Easton, Penn., visited Elizabeth, N. J., to play their annual match with the Resolute Club, and at 2 o'clock P. M. the visiting Club were taken to the Waverley Fair grounds, and there an interesting contest took place in the presence of a large crowd of spectators, among whom were numbers of ladies who occupied seats in the grand stand. Both parties entered the field dressed in new costume; the Resolutes donning pink stockings for the first time, and the Neptunes playing in grayish suits with blue leggings. Both seemed to be confident of success, and the game opened promisingly for a close contest, some sharp fielding being shown on both sides, the Neptunes taking the lead at the start by a score of 3 to 0, the close of the third inning leaving the score in their favor by the totals of 6 to 4. In the fourth innings, however, the Resolutes got the range of MCGEE'S swift pitching, and they punished him in lively style for 10 runs, and on the fifth inning ran up a score of 15, thereby taking a winning lead in the game by the totals of 20 to 8. Afterward the Neptunes added 15 runs to their score to 16 by the Resolutes, the final result being the success of the Resolutes by the totals of 40 to 23. We append the score:

FLORENCE SCANNELL'S FUNERAL.

Solemn Requiem Mass at St. Stephen's Church—Remarks by Rev. Father Henry.

The funeral of Ex-Alderman Florence Scannell, the circumstances of whose death are sufficiently well known, took place yesterday morning from the residence of his mother, No. 317 East Twenty-seventh-street. From 8 o'clock till 10 the body was exposed to view in the parlor of the house, and upward of one thousand persons visited the house to look at the remains. The body was encased in an elegant rose-wood silver-mounted coffin, and crosses and wreaths of camelias reposed upon the lid. There were no religious services at the house, but after the throng of people had viewed the corpse, the coffin was removed to a hearse, drawn by six gray horses, and followed by between sixty and seventy coaches, containing the relatives and friends of the deceased, was conveyed to St. Stephen's Church, in Twenty-eighth-street. The following gentlemen acted as pall-bearers: Michael Fagan, Ex-Alderman Crocker, Jno. W. Brown, Jno. Halloran, A. B. Ferguson, Edward Colton, Frank Matthews, Thos. Rourke, Jno. B. Prince, Bernard Costello, Patrick C. Caffray, Joseph Read, Leander Burke.

The streets on the line of the funeral procession were lined with people, and a stranger would have supposed from the imposing display that the obsequies of one of the highest dignitaries of the land were being celebrated. A platoon of policemen under the command of Capt. McDonnell of the Twenty-first Precinct, attended the cortège, and the Board of Aldermen, the Jackson Club, and one or two other organizations, of which the deceased was a member, joined in the procession.

On arriving at the church the body was borne by the pall-bearers up the central aisle and deposited upon a table in front of the altar, and burning wax-candles were placed at the head and foot of the coffin. A solemn requiem mass was then chanted for the repose of the soul of the deceased. The officiating priests were Rev. Father Henry, celebrant, Rev. Father Loughlin, deacon, and Rev. Father M. A. Carravelli, sub-deacon. During the celebration of the mass the church was about two-thirds filled with people of both sexes, and quite a large concourse remained outside.

At the close of the mass Rev. Father Henry addressed a few words to the audience upon the character of the accused, whom he said he had known for some time. He said he was a man of kind heart and well disposed to his fellow-men. He was benevolent to the poor, and the speaker had been personally cognizant of many acts of charity on the part of the deceased. He attended him in his last moments and administered to him the sacrament. After concluding the rite the deceased lay for some moments apparently in deep meditation. He then said: "O! what it is to be happy." This remark showed that his mind was in a peaceable state and that he was at peace with God. He forgave all his enemies before he died, and prayed to be forgiven. His friends should not mourn for his departure, for they had reason to believe that he now is in a better world. The speaker closed with some religious reflections suited to the occasion.

The coffin-lid was then opened, and all who chose were allowed to pass through the aisle and look at the face of the deceased. Several hundred people availed themselves of the privilege, after which the coffin was taken back to the hearse, and, followed by a large number of coaches, was conveyed to Calvary Cemetery, where the remains were buried.

Dr. Shine and Prof. Roberts, yesterday, before the funeral, extracted the bullet found imbedded in the spinal column of Florence Scannell's body, when the post-mortem examination was made. The bullet was entirely covered with new made flesh, and is a very small one, which fact has a tendency to prove that John Scannell did not fire the shot, as his pistol had a large bore.

A MUCH-NEEDED IMPROVEMENT.

Re-numbering the Brooklyn Streets—The Plan on Which the Work is Conducted.

The people of Brooklyn have been for some weeks past greatly exercised in relation to the procuring of numbers for their stores and domiciles, and although they are put to some slight inconvenience for the present, the good results of the effort to renumber the city will, in a short time, be made apparent. For many years it is well known that the system of house numbers that obtained in Brooklyn was altogether unsatisfactory in its practical working. It not unfrequently happened that two and sometimes three houses bore the same number, and the patience of visitors in search of friends was very often put to the test in consequence. Then, again, in many cases numbers were omitted from houses altogether, for the reason that there was no sure means by which these numbers could be ascertained, and directions to friends were compelled to be given somewhat after this style: "My house is brick, (or frame, or brown stone, as the case might be,) in —— street, (or avenue,) —— doors from the —— corner of —— street, —— side of the street." This style of directing one's friends is an awkward one, and takes up too much time in this age of hurry. Complaint was being constantly made in this regard to the matter, and the Brooklyn Common Council found it necessary to provide a remedy against what had come to be an unbearable nuisance. In 1867 an attempt was made to re-number the city, but the plan by which it was attempted to be carried out failed to secure accuracy, and, after about $14,000 had been uselessly spent in the work, it was dropped. Early in May of the present year, the subject again came before the Common Council, and that body, profiting by the experience of the past, determined to have the job well and thoroughly done. Aldermen Whitney, Whiting and Cunningham were appointed a committee to take the matter in charge. They immediately employed Mr. R. F. Toombs, a competent City Surveyor, to make a copies of all the property-maps in the various wards, showing the streets, intersections, &c., and to locate the new numbers thereon. This work was done to the satisfaction of the Common Council, who approved the maps thus made, and in June last passed an ordinance requiring every house-owner, after two weeks' time, to number his property in accordance with the designations laid down by Mr. Toombs, or default thereof, to pay a fine of $20 for every neglect so to do. The time in which to procure these numbers from the Assessor's office was afterward extended for three weeks, and subsequently again extended till Oct. 1, 1870. House-owners are now given till June 1, 1871, in which to use the old numerical designations; but after that date the law will be put rigidly into effect and the fines imposed. At first the Committee determined that a number should be given to every twelve and a half feet of ground fronting on any street; but as this would work badly, by giving two numbers to every lot in the city of twenty-five feet front, it was, at the suggestion of Mr. Toombs, and other surveyors of the city, changed for the one that is now in vogue. That plan is as follows: Every twenty-five feet frontage on any street gets a number. If it extends over twenty-five feet six inches in frontage, it gets two numbers. If there be an amount of unapportioned (vacant) property lying together, every twenty feet frontage of it gets a number, as also every fractional part of twenty feet. The even numbers are invariably on the right and the odd numbers on the left-hand side of the street throughout the whole city. In cases where a building is on the corner of any two streets, it gets its regular number for the street on which it fronts, and besides this, the map shows other numbers assigned, according to the rule of one number for every twenty feet as far as it may extend on the other street (the one parallel with its side walls.) Of course, it is not necessary that these latter numbers shall be used; but provision is thus made for having such buildings as may be hereafter erected on the same property accurately designated, in case the frontage should be changed by future owners. By carrying out this simple plan—getting numbers directly from the ward books on file in the Assessor's office—it is expected that the city will never again require re-numbering. Fractional numbers are, by this system, entirely dispensed with, and need only be used where lots are split up (as they doubtless will be in many cases, to suit the convenience of trade,) after the maps and diagrams of property have now been filed, and all the property thereon represented has been accurately numbered. Already over 40,000 numbers have been given out at the Assessor's office, and a crowd of property-owners is daily in attendance there, desirous of knowing what are to be the numerical designations of their "pieces and parcels of land, situate, lying and being" in sundry and divers parts of the city.

This measure has to some extent benefited such as are in the business of metal-smithing, as it has produced a call for metal figures. The job printers, too, find it beneficial to their trade, as the change of numbers has necessitated among business men in Brooklyn the printing of cards, circulars, bill-heads, &c., bearing the new numbers of their stores, &c., instead of the old. It can hardly be said, however, that much is being done in this direction as yet, nor will there be, probably, until after Jan. 1, 1871, when the new law will be practically enforced throughout the city.

Removing the Obstructions at Hell Gate—Gen. Newton's Plans.

Work upon the Hell Gate obstructions has temporarily ceased, owing to an exhaustion of the funds appropriated by Congress for the purpose. An additional appropriation of $250,000 has been made within a few days, but as no official notification of the fact has reached Gen. Newton, of the Engineer Corps, no steps have been taken to renew operations. Gen. Newton's chief point of action at present is Hallet's Point Reef, in which, by means of a coffer dam, he has blasted a pit twenty-five feet in depth, and averaging one hundred feet in width. The general supposition is, that he intends to bore horizontal galleries in different directions from this excavation, which are to be filled with nitro-glycerine and exploded. He does not desire this if it should be practicable to avoid it. The method would cause large fragments of rock to fall into the adjacent water, which would obstruct navigation and be expensive to remove. He prefers to excavate under the rock to a depth of about forty feet below low-water mark, leaving a roof of rock fifteen feet thick, which he will ultimately cause to fall into the space below, and still leave the requisite depth of twenty-five feet below low-water mark, for the passage of vessels. Galleries will be bored only in case this scheme should not prove feasible.

ARREST OF PARTIES FOR ATTEMPTING TO DISCHARGE A CARGO IN BROOKLYN.

The English steamer Saladin, Capt. E. Chadwick, with 480 tons of coffee, reached Brooklyn with a permit from the Quarantine Commissioners, in which they were granted the privilege of unloading their cargo at Martin's stores, the Captain being directed to report back to the Quarantine officer. The owners then applied to Dr. Cochran for a permit to discharge the cargo, but the doctor refused to grant one, on the ground that the one given them by the Quarantine Commissioners was not a clean bill of health. The owners of the steamer then reported back to the Quarantine Commissioners, when they were informed that the permit given them was the same as those used by the Commissioners in all cases, and they should grant no other. The owners then returned, left the permit at the office of Dr. Cochran, and this morning proceeded to unload the vessel. They were ordered to desist, but refusing to do so, a posse of Police were ordered out, and by direction of Dr. Cochran, the Captain, Edmund Chadwick, the stevedore, Timothy Hagan, one of the consignees, Mr. Bask, and the clerk, A. F. D. Bush, were arrested and taken before Justice Buckley. After considerable parley the Justice held them to bail in the sum of $500 each, to answer on Saturday, 16th inst.

The matter was then taken to the Board of Health, where the circumstances were all related and various opinions expressed.

Dr. Cochran contended that the Quarantine Commissioners had no right to designate what wharf the vessel should land at, and that, according to the permit given, she was still held in quarantine, the Captain being directed to report back there again.

The Mayor said he did not see how they could compel the Commissioners to give any other permit, but if the vessel was not right the Brooklyn Health Officer had the power to send her back.

A committee of two was finally appointed to wait upon Dr. Carnochan.

A Doctor in Trouble—Serious Charges and Strong Evidence.

The case of Dr. Michael A. A. Wolf, already noticed in our columns, was before Judge Brady, of the Supreme Court, at Chambers, again yesterday. The doctor stands charged with malpractice in reference to Matilda Henningson and Henrietta Ullman, some weeks since. An indictment has been found against him in one case, and he has been ordered to find bail to await his trial in the Court of General Sessions in the sum of $10,000 as to each charge. His counsel believing that this amount of bail was excessive, obtained a writ of certiorari to bring up the proceedings, and a writ of habeas corpus to bring the offender before the Supreme Court to have the bail reduced to $5,000. The case was submitted to Judge Brady on Monday last, and yesterday he rendered his decision by ordering the doctor to be held in the sum of $10,000 in each case, the sureties to justify in that amount. The Judge said he had examined the papers very carefully, and he thought that prima facie, very strong cases had been made out against the doctor. After reading the testimony which had been adduced, he did not think it would be his duty to admit the offender to bail at all, and he would not, except for the fact that the Recorder had already fixed his bail at $10,000. That official was no doubt more familiar with all the circumstances than he (Judge Brady) could be from reading the evidence. One of the cases, however, was a very strong one against the prisoner.

Mr. Blunt, Assistant District-Attorney, said they proposed to try him on the indictment first found, but he would be necessary to have him held to answer on the other charge as well.

Dr. Wolf appeared to be very much affected by the decision of the Judge, and when he reached the hallway he seemed to have fallen into a swoon; at all events, it took four men to carry him down stairs and put him into a carriage.

Crimes and Casualties.

Leopold Stein, Label Lister, Henry Nelson and Matthias Heyman were all temporarily committed at the Tombs, yesterday, on the charge of receiving stolen goods. On May 26, the store of Henry W. Freeman, No. 39 Mercer-street, was entered by burglars, and $350 worth of silks stolen. Yesterday $27 worth of the silk was found on the premises of M. Heyman, No. 46 Grand-street, who purchased it from Leopold Stein, of No. 350 Houston-street, he having bought it from Label Lister, of the Bowery, on whose premises $250 worth more of the silk was found. Lister said he bought the whole of the silk from Henry Nelson, of No. 185 Grand-street, who has several times given trouble to the Police for receiving stolen goods.

David Lindsay, aged thirty-three, salesman, was, yesterday, fully committed at the Tombs on the charge of passing a false check for $25, purporting to be drawn on the Chatham National Bank by A. E. Bartlett, upon William Reagan, of Park-place, and fraudulently receiving value therefor. Bail was fixed at $1,000.

Jacob Burdell, aged twenty-five, of No. 217 Mott-street, was held, yesterday, at the Tombs for robbing Edward Fallon, of No. 115 Elizabeth-street, on June 25, of a watch and chain worth $35.

Patrick Moore, aged twenty-eight, a shoemaker of Washington-street, was fully committed yesterday at the Tombs in default of $2,000 bail, on the charge of stealing a wallet from the pocket of Mary Rossiter, of Rutherford Park, N. J., while she was in Washington Market yesterday morning. Officer Murphy arrested Moore with the wallet in his possession, having also seen him take it from the pocket of the complainant's dress.

Dennis Mahoni, aged fifty, of Avenue C, on Tuesday afternoon, met Ellen Stamford, of No. 27 Hudson-street, in Franklin-street, and seeing a roll of bills in her hand, seized the money amounting to $30 45, and ran away with it. Ellen pursued Dennis, caught him, and then held his arm until an officer arrived, when she gave him into custody. When taken to the Tombs yesterday, Justice Hogan committed Dennis for trial in default of $1,000 bail, notwithstanding his persistence in saying that Ellen gave him the money.

Henry W. Geston, aged thirty-two, of No. 65 Bowery, architect and law clerk, was committed, yesterday, by Justice Hogan, at the Tombs, on the charge of falsely testifying, on July 20, 1869, before a referee, in the divorce suit of John Gowan vs. Mary Eliza Gowan, and swearing that John Gowan had had illicit companionship with Lizzie Smith on May 14, and with Emily Fowler at a subsequent time, and that he knew of these facts. It being testified by Noble A. Hamilton, of No. 336 Third-avenue, and by John Gowan, that Gowan never saw to his knowledge, and never knew the said women, and had never visited the place at which it was sworn by Geston the criminal companionship took place. The prisoner was held for trial, the question of bail to be settled to-morrow.

George Bateman, aged eleven, of No. 356 West Thirty-fifth-street, died yesterday, at Bellevue Hospital, from the injuries sustained on Tuesday by being run over on the Eleventh-avenue by a Hudson River train, while attempting to jump on the cars.

The body of John Fay, aged thirty, who was drowned on Saturday in the North River, was yesterday recovered near Barclay-street, and removed to No. 441 West Thirteenth-street.

Jarvis Jackson, a patient of Bellevue Hospital, aged fifteen, while trying, yesterday, to rescue a fellow-patient's crutch which had dropped into the river, fell in and was drowned.

Elizabeth Soren, aged thirty, being despondent, yesterday, swallowed strychnine at No. 308 West Twenty-second street, and died in less than half an hour.

Matilda Livingder, of No. 125 East Houston-street, charged August Fabact with stealing from her, on Tuesday, $11 90. Justice Welch, at Essex Market Police Court, yesterday, committed the prisoner to answer at the Court of Special Sessions in default of $300 bail.

Wm. Harris, a colored man, was brought before Justice Shandley, at the Jefferson Market Police Court, yesterday, charged with having stolen, on Tuesday evening, articles valued at $12 from Mrs. Synthia S. Wylie, of No. 125 Fifth-avenue, in whose service the prisoner had been for some time, and was discharged. He sneaked into the house, Tuesday evening, and committed the theft, stealing also from Mr. D. O. Waite, residing in the house, $425 worth of clothes. He acknowledged his guilt, and was held for trial at the Court of General Sessions.

Frederick Leguer, a German, aged twenty-two, of No. 116 Whiett-street, was brought before Justice Welsh, at the Essex Market Police Court, yesterday, charged with having stabbed Frank Leguer in the back with a large butcher's knife. The prisoner was committed to answer at the Court of General Sessions in default of $500.

At the Jefferson Market Police Court, yesterday, before Justice Shandley, James Wilson was charged with having broken into Mrs. Jane Johnson's house, No. 545 West Thirty-fifth-street, and taken property worth $40. He was committed for trial.

Henry Bushman, of No. 121 Greene-street, and Maggie Johnson, of No. 182 Greene-street, were yesterday charged, before Justice Shandley, at the Jefferson Market Police Court, with keeping disorderly houses. They were held to bail in $300 each.

The Gold Market—Subsidence of the Excitement.

The Gold Exchange was very quiet yesterday, there being scarcely any excitement, and quite a contrast with the two previous days. The transactions at the Gold Exchange Bank, on Tuesday, amounted to $127,509,000. The news from Europe seemed to indicate that peace was likely to prevail, and showed that American securities had recovered to the point at which they were before the panic. The prices of gold yesterday were as follows:

Industrial Co-Operation in this City.

The carriage-making firm of Brewster & Co., in this City, announced to their men, six months ago, that in addition to their wages they would allow them a half-yearly dividend of one-tenth of the net profits of the firm, to be divided according to the greater or less amount of work performed by each. The step was taken to avoid strikes. The firm felt that if the men became concerned in the business it would be contrary to their interest to strike. They imagined, also, that the extra money disbursed would be saved in the added diligence of their employes, and in their determination to allow no idlers by their fellow-workers. The firm also expected that under the new arrangement no material would be unnecessarily wasted. The first dividend was declared yesterday. It gave 3½ per cent. on the earnings of each man. Some who have earned much during the six months will receive various sums, from $35 to $52, and others, to whom the smallest wages are due, will receive from $5 to $10. A number of newcomers receive nothing. The cash due will be paid to-morrow, 15th inst. Messrs. Brewster & Co. find that under the new plan they have realized nearly as high profits on the same amount of business as in the previous half years, when no division was made. In future, they expect to obtain fully as much. Many of the men, who were shy of novelties and wanting in confidence, felt dubious regarding their promised emoluments. They are now convinced, and are well satisfied. They perceive that industrial co-operation is a tangible benefit, and enter upon their second term of partnership with diligence and hope. After this date, dividends will be paid yearly on the 1st July.

Messrs. A. L. Sturtevant & Co., a large iron-pump manufacturing concern in East Twenty-third-street, employing 120 men, began a similar experiment last September, and have declared a dividend of 4 38-100 per cent. upon the earnings of their men, payable to-morrow. Some of their hands will thus realize over $100, and many over $50. They were influenced by the same motives as the Messrs. Brewster, but, like them, desire to benefit their men in every possible way, consistently with their own interest. They hope for higher dividends next July.

Board of Assistant Aldermen.

The Board of Assistant Aldermen met at 3 P. M., yesterday, Mr. Galvin in the chair.

The resolution to place a patent burner and reflector on each of the public lamps, (about 17,000,) at a cost not exceeding $15 each lamp, was read, and a motion made to refer it to a special committee, which was lost. The resolution was then concurred in. A communication from the Mayor, calling attention to the clause of the Election law of 1870, relative to redistricting the City was read, and referred to a special committee of five.

The sum of $2,562 88 was donated to the pastor of the Church of the Resurrection, to pay taxes and water-rents.

Mr. Durnin called up the resolutions relative to the dress in which Alderman Florence Scannell, and moved that they be concurred in, and that a committee be appointed to carry out their provisions. Mr. Durnin's motion was adopted, and the Board then adjourned to Monday next.

The Twenty-Second Regiment and the Ladies of Sing Sing.

In consequence of the storm which prevailed on Tuesday night, the terpsichorean finale to the entertainment given to the Twenty-second Regiment by the authorities and citizens of Sing Sing, was interrupted to the great disappointment of the young ladies of the village. The gallant boys in blue, with a true appreciation of the case, volunteered to return last evening, in uniform, for the purpose of carrying out the programme by escorting the fair daughters of Sing Sing to the tent erected for the hop, and there inaugurating the merry dance. The regimental band also returned to Sing Sing last evening, and furnished music for the occasion, which was altogether a very delightful one.

Chess—The Cafe International vs. The Brooklyn Chess Club.

A match has been arranged between the Café International and the Brooklyn Chess Club, which will commence in a few days. Capt. Mackenzie, Dr. Barnett, Mr. E. Delmar, and two or three more strong players, will do battle for the Café International, and Brooklyn will be represented by Messrs. F. E. Brenzinger, C. A. Gilberg, M. Munoz, A. J. De Con and F. Perrin. The play will not be in consultation, but each champion will be opposed to one of the opposite party, to be decided by lot. On Tuesdays the games will be played at the Café International, No. 10 Chatham-square, and on Saturdays at the Brooklyn Chess Club, No. 280 Fulton-street.

Wednesday, July 13—P. M.

The Cable telegrams today seemed to give assurance of delay, for the present, of the outbreak between France and Prussia. How long the inevitable fight will be postponed remains wholly uncertain. The French Funds have improved; the English Funds have almost wholly recovered; our own Funds are better in London and Frankfort. In this market Gold has settled down to about 112⅛@112⅜ per cent. Messrs. Von Hoffman paid the Treasury 112.20 per cent. for the $1,000,000 sold for the Sinking Fund at 12 o'clock. The offers to buy amounted altogether to $2,725,000, as follows:

The telegrams from Washington report the final passage of the Funding Bill and the concurrence of the two Houses in the Tax and Tariff Bill. The offensive section of the Funding Bill to the South and West in regard to forcing their new banks to use only the 4 and 5 per cent. bonds is left out. The bill as passed creates $1,500,000,000 of new stock, principal and interest made payable in gold on the face of the bonds, and free of all taxation, in three classes: First, $200,000,000 bearing 5 per cent. interest, payable at the option of the Government after ten years; Second, $300,000,000 bearing 4½ per cent. interest payable after fifteen years, and Third, the original House bill, $1,000,000,000, bearing 4 per cent., payable at the option of the Government after thirty years. As the present National Banks have deposited with the United States Treasurer as security for their circulation, $155,000,000 in United States 5-20s, subject to be called in at any time by the Treasury on the negotiation of a lower rate stock, we should not be surprised that the bulk of the authorized $300,000,000 5 per cents. should be absorbed, at an early day, by these banks. In any event, it is reasonably certain that this first class of bonds will soon be taken up.

The new Tax and Tariff Bill contains a provision already concurred in by both Houses, for the direct importation of Foreign Merchandise, other than Wines and Spirits, into the cities of St. Louis, Chicago and Cincinnati, via New-York, without detention or warehousing or examination at New-York, or the prepayment of Customs Duties. The Bill provides that the goods shall be transferred directly from the ship to the railway, or other transportation company for the West, as in Bond, upon the presentation of the original invoice and Consular certificate to the Collector of the Port of New-York. The same principle applies to any other city of not less than 150,000 inhabitants, and of course to such Cities as Philadelphia, Baltimore and New Orleans, importing via New-York, in place of direct from Europe. It applies also to San Francisco, to the arrival of merchandise from China, Japan, and Australia, destined for the ports of the Atlantic or for European ports. There is already a law applicable to Foreign Goods arriving at any of our seaports destined for the British Provinces, in which the principle of transferring the goods to the Railway, without expense or detention at the port of arrival, is recognized.

This new measure will undoubtedly increase the business of direct importation at St. Louis, Chicago and Cincinnati, besides facilitating importations for Philadelphia, Baltimore, &c., ordered in New-York. At present there is about five millions of Customs per annum deposited at New-York for the out ports, because of the old regulations in regard to inspection, valuation, &c., at New-York, all of which involve numerous expenses and most vexatious delays. It was stated, for example, in the debate on the measure, that the Western importers are subject to a delay of from four to six weeks, and then to extra fees to New-York Customs officials, to get their goods through. An invoice of Christmas Holiday Goods arriving here on the 1st of December last was not received at St. Louis until the 15th January, too late for the season.

We confess we are not surprised at the passage of this measure. The delays and expenses—we will say nothing of the suspicion of corrupt practices—in passing Goods through New-York destined for the out ports, are perhaps not altogether exceptional, as similar grievances are no doubt endured by many of our own honest importers, but they are evils that can be and should be avoided, and we are far from blaming the Representatives of the West in the Senate and House of Representatives for so changing the law as to make such tribute to New-York unnecessary.

In this connetion we may also report that the House has passed a Bill to make Jersey City (now in the New-York Collection District) an independent Port of Entry. The Bill may not be reached in the Senate in the few remaining days of the session, but it will come up in December, and no doubt pass into law unless the shameful ab

NEWS OF THE DAY.

EUROPE.

The early dispatches, yesterday, represent a better feeling as prevailing on the question agitating the Continent, but that at the same time the military preparations of France have not been abated in the slightest. The report that Prince LEOPOLD had withdrawn from the field as a candidate for the Spanish crown was confirmed in the French journals of yesterday. The Germans are represented as indignant and distrustful of France, and to regard the continual warlike preparations of France as proof that the quarrel is deeper on her side than the opposition to Prince LEOPOLD. The Prince is said to have withdrawn because as a German soldier he would not do anything to cause a war in Germany and Spain. The Bourse advanced during the day to 70 francs, and 80 centimes for rentes, but a feeling of distrust prevailed last night and a decline followed. Madrid dispatches say military preparations have begun there. An interview took place there, yesterday, between the representatives of France, England and the United States and Minister SAGASTA. The result has not been made known. The Vienna journals denounce Prussian "arrogance," and ask the friendly offices of Great Britain to preserve peace....The Paris papers confirm the statement that news of a massacre in Pekin had reached there. Steps are to be taken to trace and punish the perpetrator of the hoax....Another conflagration is said to have occurred in Constantinople on the 12th inst. It swept away 1,500 houses, chiefly of the poorer class of the population....The steamship Sidonian reports at Glasgow, yesterday, having passed the yacht Cambria in latitude 54° 30', longitude 26° 38'. The Dauntless was not in sight.

CONGRESS.

In the Senate, yesterday, the Choctaw claims were again brought forward, in the form of a bill to settle them, which was referred to the Indian Committee. The annual Post Route bill was passed. The Conference Committee on the Tax and Tariff bill made a report, which was adopted. Mr. SHERMAN, in explaining it, said that the more important of the Senate amendments had been agreed to by the House, and that the classification of sugar was in substance the Senate classification. According to this report, all Assistant Assessors now engaged in assessing taxes which are stricken out of the bill, are to be immediately discharged, and the Supervisors' districts are to be consolidated. The Conference Committee on the Funding bill also made a report, which was adopted. [The bill is printed in full in another part of today's paper.] The Deficiency Appropriation bill was reported back, with amendments. A resolution was offered by Mr. SUMNER for an inquiry into the treatment of J. W. SMITH, the colored cadet at West Point, to which objection was made by Mr. BAYARD. A bill was introduced to give bounties to soldiers, honorably discharged, who enlisted between May 4 and July 22, 1861, and to the widow, children, father and mother of soldiers killed or dead in the service, enlisted for less than one year. The credentials of MORGAN C. HAMILTON, of Texas, were presented. The bill to grant Mrs. LINCOLN a pension was considered, and an amendment to give her $15,000 in lieu of a pension, was rejected. The Senate then went into Executive Session, which continued until 8 P. M., when the doors were reopened and the Deficiency Appropriation bill was taken up. Various amendments were made to the bill. The bill absorbed the greater part of the session. During the evening a bill was passed exempting pork-packers, lard-renderers and smokers of hams from internal tax as manufacturers. At a late hour the Senate adjourned.

In the House, Mr. BUTLER'S resolution ordering an investigation of the complaint made as to ill-treatment of the colored cadet at West Point, was adopted. The Senate amendments to the Miscellaneous Appropriation bill were non-concurred in, and a Conference Committee was appointed; one was also appointed on the Army bill. A resolution was reported from the Commerce Committee for a sub-committee to investigate during the recess the tariffs and exclusive rights of ocean telegraph lines. A report from the Conference Committee on the Tax and Tariff bill was received; and after debate it was agreed to, by yeas 143, and nays 49. The report of the Conference Committee on the Funding bill was also received and agreed to. A joint resolution, suspending the use of whisky-meters at distilleries until the further action of Congress, was reported and adopted. Mr. FARNSWORTH attempted to procure the passage of a General Amnesty bill, but the House refused to suspend the rules for that purpose. Majority and minority reports were received from the Committee who have been investigating the charges against Gen. HOWARD. The former acquits him "of the groundless and causeless charges against him," and declares that he is deserving of the gratitude of the people for having successfully organized and faithfully administered the Freedmen's Bureau; the latter recommends the trial of Gen. HOWARD by Court-martial. Both reports were ordered printed. The House adjourned at 4¾ o'clock.

GENERAL.

Private advices received here, yesterday, to June 18, state that the Darien treaty had passed the Colombian House of Representatives and would go back to the Senate. The amendments, it is believed, will not prove acceptable to our Government.

An Ottawa, Ontario, dispatch gives currency to a report that the Governor-General of Canada will soon issue a proclamation admitting Manitoba into the Dominion, with an amnesty clause. Fort Garry advices represent that RIEL is virtually a prisoner among his own people, who have sent deputations to offer the expedition the assistance of the inhabitants along the route.

A collision between the down mail and up accommodation trains occurred yesterday on the Northern Railroad at Pillsbury switch, near Canaan, N. H. CHARLES CLARK, of Concord, one of the engineers, was killed, and F. GRANT, the other engineer, L. BADGER, a brakeman, and E. YORK, a fireman, were badly injured. No severe injuries to passengers have been reported.

The trial of Gen. STARR, the Fenian leader at Trout River, continued yesterday at Canandaigua. The testimony for the prosecution closed, the defense made their argument, and the Judge charged the jury how to deliberate. The Court then proceeded with the trial of THOMPSON, another of the raiders.

Another fight occurred, yesterday, among Philadelphia firemen returning from a fire, in which two members of one company were badly cut.

Ireland's Feuds in America.

"The old feud renewed" is the reporter's phrase, employed to describe the conflict between Orangemen and Irish Catholics on Tuesday. It is a phrase that misstates the case. The feud between the Orangemen and the Roman Catholics of Ireland has never ceased. It dates further back than the battle of the Boyne, and has been cultivated as sedulously upon this continent as in Ireland itself.

About the unhappy occurrences at Elm Park and its vicinity, there cannot be two opinions. The Orangemen, with their friends and families, had a right to anticipate a peaceable enjoyment of their picnic. Their gathering violated no law. Their proceedings, however we estimate their prudence or good taste, were of a character which entitled them to protection. The mob by whom they were assailed were altogether in the wrong. A certain amount of lawless organization there must have been, or the muster of Catholic laborers from streets and works on the route of the procession would have been impracticable. They were the aggressors. They invaded the grounds of which the Orangemen had rightful possession, and began the series of savage, bloody contests which only the prompt and energetic interposition of the Police kept within bounds. The fact that they finally suffered most will not divert the current of popular sympathy in their favor. Amidst a multitude of irreconcilable details, enough has been ascertained with certainty to fasten upon the Catholic crowd the guilt of having sought an occasion for riot, and of having initiated the murderous strife.

In judging of the moral responsibility of the affair, it seems to us that blame attaches to both sides. The actual criminality is all on the side of the Irish Catholic mob. But, on the other hand, an Orange procession on the Twelfth of July, with badges and ribbons which recall to the Irish Catholic mind bitter memories of his native land, and with music which a natural association of ideas renders offensive, and therefore irritating to a class numerous in every large city,—this is not a thing which challenges our admiration. Bad as it is in Ireland, or in Liverpool, or in the backwoods of Canada, there it is at least intelligible. Here it is as much out of place as would be the procession of the Host, or the cavalcade of Lady Godiva.

Orangeism, we cannot forget, is in its nature political rather than religious. It typifies English supremacy in Ireland, and the accession of the reigning dynasty in England, quite as much as any principle of Protestantism. "British connection" is not less an Orange maxim than "Down with the Pope." In Ireland it is on the Orange organization that English authority may most confidently rely. In Canada it is the Orange organization which supplies the soul to political movements having for their purpose the perpetuation of the colonial relation. Everywhere it is, in the British sense, a "loyal" as well as a Protestant organization. WILLIAM, Prince of Orange, is the foremost and brightest name in its calendar.

What is the mission of such an institution in the United States? What do we want with a secret order which has no significance anywhere, except as a champion of British connection? As a society to protect the Protestant religion it might be useful. In that case it should be avowedly a Protestant association. But in this instance the day selected for the display, the colors worn, the tunes played, the speeches delivered, all indicate a strictly Orange demonstration—one which we might look for in Londonderry or Belfast, but which is wholly out of place in an American city. Let Ireland and Canada keep this curse of Orangeism to themselves.

Irritating as it is, however, the Irish Catholics should be so educated and restrained by their spiritual teachers and guides as to respect the law, and concede even to Orangemen privileges which they never hesitate to take for themselves. As interpreted in this country, St. Patrick's Day is as obnoxious to Orangemen as the Twelfth of July is to Irish Catholics. Each is so managed as to be a cause of offense to the opposite section of the Irish population. By these and other methods, Irishmen in America keep alive remembrances which should have no abiding-place here; with their baggage they bring the feuds of the old land; by contrivances which have no legitimate purpose, and therefore no just excuse, they foster antipathies and prejudices of which, as applied to Ireland, history affords ample explanation, but which those who would preserve a free and peaceful Republic cannot condemn too strongly, or resist too steadfastly.

We take this City to be New-York, not Limerick or Londonderry, and we propose to cherish social relations and a political system which make it necessary to keep both ST. PATRICK and WILLIAM III. in their proper positions. We have no quarrel with those who reverence either. But as American citizens, it is the duty of such persons to repress animosities born in Ireland, to respect the perfect freedom of religious conviction which our institutions guarantee to every man, and to cultivate the obedience to law which lies at the foundation of American order. These may be truisms, but the Elm Park riot affords painful proof of the manner in which they are systematically disregarded by a not inconsiderable class of our population.

Prussia and South Germany.

In the midst of the mass of contradictory telegrams on the situation in Europe, it is tolerably clear that if there is to be war, the casus belli will not be the candidature of Prince LEOPOLD. Should it be revived, it will be but a step in hostilities already declared upon other grounds, and not itself the basis of conflict. There is no good reason to doubt the assurance of the Ministerial Constitutionnel so far as it relates to the formal withdrawal of the Prince of HOHENZOLLERN. Read by the light of continued warlike preparations, both in France and Prussia, there are many reasons for being skeptical as to its further opinion regarding the "pacific solution" of existing difficulties. Only twelve days ago, we find the same journal writing as follows: "Our country has no intention of commencing a reaction against the changes accomplished in Germany in 1866; but it ought to constitute itself the vigilant guardian of the treaty of Prague." At the same time a discussion was in process within the Legislative Chamber, in the course of which the "misfortune" of Sadowa was pretty frequently alluded to, and the assumed designs of Prussia upon South Germany made the pretext for maintaining the annual military contingent undiminished. Guided by such indications of the spirit existing in France, it is not difficult to understand the attitude of Prussia, fairly aroused as she now seems to be, to the overbearing pretensions of her military rival.

Whatever opinions may be entertained as to the right of France to maintain such a line of European policy as she has lately indicated, it is beyond a doubt that any interference she may volunteer between the two sections of Germany will be almost equally resented by both. The South German States may be briefly described as two kingdoms, two grand duchies, and two petty princedoms, united in a loose sort of Confederation, of which Bavaria is the head. They contain about nine millions of the existing thirty-eight millions of German population. After the seven days' war of 1866, Austria left each of them to make its own terms with the conqueror, and out of these grew the treaties concluded at Nikolsburg, but only made public eight months afterward, by which, in consideration of a guarantee of territorial independence, Bavaria, Wurtemberg, and Baden agreed to place their armies in time of war under the leadership of the King of Prussia. Speaking in June, 1867, the Prince of HOHENLOHE, Prime Minister of the first of these States, remarked, in explanation of this agreement, "When I say that Bavaria would, in the event of war, place her army under the command of the King of Prussia, I suppose the case of a war in which the integrity of Germany, in its actual limits, would be menaced from any side whatever." Or, as a French writer, quoting the passage, remarks: "Let France extend her arms to grasp the Rhine, and Germany would rise as one man." It is perfectly true that in the South German States, with the single exception of Baden, there exists but a very sectional attachment to Prussia. Even the Suabian enthusiasts for national unity have begun to suspect that "one great Germany is a dream, and that the only possible change is to one great Prussia." But, if compelled to throw in their lot with either France or Prussia, there cannot be a moment's doubt that they would select the latter, and that a declaration of war by France would only hasten the completion of a union which the bond of a Customs Parliament and a military alliance has already half consummated.

The Redeeming Work of the Session.

The Tax and Tariff bill is out of jeopardy at last. The Conference Committee, which has been some days engaged in the consideration of details, yesterday adjusted its differences, and its report was adopted by both Houses. Mr. SHERMAN fixes the amount of tax reduction effected by the bill at seventy-six millions.

The enactment of this measure is the redeeming work of the session. It is not perfect, either in its principle or its range. It prolongs taxes which should have been repealed, and in its tariff clauses it violates the principles which should govern all revenue reform. For these reasons, it cannot be accepted as evidence of the familiarity of our legislators with economic science, or of uniform regard for the wishes of the people in preference to the sinister interest of monopolists. A little more boldness on the part of Mr. SCHENCK and Mr. SHERMAN would have given us a reduction of a hundred millions, instead of seventy-six, without embarrassing the Government or imperiling the public credit. With all these defects, however, the bill is a boon for which the whole community will be grateful. It lightens perceptibly the load under which enterprise and industry have staggered. It arrests the Treasury policy which has sacrificed everything to a Quixotic desire to diminish an unmatured debt. It commits the Republican Party to a policy of fiscal amendments which, thoroughly effected, will infuse fresh blood into the trade of the country, and increase its prosperity.

Had Congress closed the session without affording the relief which this bill provides, the Republican Party would have been required to wage an up-hill fight in the Fall campaign. The odium arising from continued indifference to an urgent and universal demand would have entailed defeat in many districts. The reduction of taxes is, then, a successful stroke of strategy as well as a wise measure of relief. It opens a new page of the Republican record, and will be a source of marked benefit in the canvass. It will be hailed by tax-payers everywhere as evidence that their wants have not been overlooked, and as a pledge of further retrenchment and reform.

Our Chinese Immigrants.

Although the vexed question of Chinese immigration is at present attracting much attention, there appears to be a marked tendency on the part of both writers and speakers to ignore its consideration from that point of view which must, after all, be the one which can alone affect our official action in the matter. The Government of the United States has solemnly recognized China as a Treaty Power, firstly by the Treaty of the 18th June, 1858, and more recently by the "Additional Articles," signed by Mr. BURLINGAME on behalf of the Chinese Emperor, in July, 1868, and promulgated by the United States Chargé d'Affaires at Pekin in November last. While, therefore, the pressure of public opinion may effect the modification or abrogation of agreements which tend to the injury of American interests, we are bound, so long as they remain in force, to act up to their provisions. Much useless declamation has been expended in the attempt to prove that Chinese immigration should be resisted on the score of certain depraved characteristics of the coolie. But these do not in the least affect his political status, guaranteed as it is, under certain conditions, by treaty agreement. As regards the allegations put forth, it would rather seem that the balance of proof lies in favor of the much-abused immigrant. He is reported by those who have had the opportunity of observing his class in China, to be sober, hard-working, and fully up to the average of laboring populations in other countries as regards morality and freedom from the commission of violent crimes; while he has proved, in this country, a docile and peaceable resident. The primary question at issue, apart from that of wages, is, therefore, how far the laws of the United States, as affected by our agreements with the Chinese Government, compel us to receive the Chinaman among us as a resident or citizen. Upon this point a few remarks may tend to clear up a wide-spread misunderstanding.

The fifth article of the Burlingame convention explicitly recognizes the right of both Chinese and Americans to change their homes and allegiance, and also the "mutual advantage of the free migration of their subjects and citizens from the one country to the other." The contracting parties reprobate "any other than an entirely voluntary emigration," and make it a penal offense for an American citizen "to take Chinese subjects to the United States or to any other foreign country without their free and voluntary consent." No provision whatever is made regarding contracts or engagements. Our law does not recognize any contract made in China, and that probably was held to be sufficient. But, on the other hand, there is nothing to prohibit such contracts being signed; and all residents in China are aware that, owing to the peculiar social organizations of the people, the emigrant coolie will hold himself bound by these agreements.

To engage "contract coolies" is, therefore, neither absolutely nor constructively illegal, and provided they leave China with their own "free and voluntary consent," we are bound, by the article quoted, to admit them as residents in the United States. The succeeding article of the convention, however, contains a clause which, if enforced, may be used to either forbid Chinese immigration altogether, or to deny them the rights of citizenship. It is therein provided that "citizens of the United States in China shall enjoy the same privileges, immunities, or exemptions in respect to travel or residence as may there be enjoyed by the citizens or subjects of the most favored nation." Now it is notorious in China that while Americans and British subjects are stringently prohibited from residing in the interior, a large number of Russian traders reside, not merely at Kalgon, on the great highway between China and Russia, but at inland cities in the vicinity of the Upper Yangtzu River. The well-known fear entertained by China of Russian aggression is, of course, the reason which insures them this privilege, though the British Minister recently endeavored to show that Americans or British subjects were as much at liberty to reside there as were the Russians. But what are the facts? Passports granting permission of residence have invariably been refused by both our own and the British representatives, notably on the ground that the Chinese authorities would refuse to viséd them. It cannot, therefore, be held that China performs her part of the reciprocal agreement, and the United States Government is, consequently, at liberty to exercise a similar discretion in withholding from Chinese immigrants a certain portion of the rights or immunities granted to other aliens.

This being the case, it becomes a grave question as to how far this power, conferred upon us by Chinese bad faith, should be exercised. To oppose free immigration would be as futile as ungenerous. But there are some points which demand consideration. The two great issues raised by Chinese immigration are: the danger of the immigrants acquiring political influence which they are incompetent to wield with discretion, and their effect upon the labor market. It is much easier to deal with the former than the latter question. But it must be remembered that similar questions have already arisen, and have settled themselves according to the inevitable laws which regulate demand and supply. When Irish immigration became a grand fact, much grumbling arose on the part of native-born artisans and laborers, who saw in the influx a certain reduction of their wages. In like manner the Irish workmen opposed the tide of German immigration—less vigorously, it is true, than they now oppose the Chinese, because the new-comers were able to take care of themselves, but none the less cordially—and yet there is room for more. The alarm with regard to an overwhelming influx of Chinese is wholly unnecessary, and we very much doubt whether native American working men are taking any part in the present outcry.

Steam-Cars on the Water-Front.

Some of the plans for the improvement of our water-front provide for the construction of double tracks over the landward end of the piers, on which passenger-trains, drawn by steam, may be run as often as the necessities of the traveling public require. The idea is a good one, and in many respects the most feasible of any of the suggestions yet put forth for the relief of local travel. With fast trains running on both sides of the island, from the Battery to Spuyten Duyvil, the problem of swift transportation from business centers to suburban homes, which has so long vexed us, would be successfully solved. Nor need there be any fear that such a railway system would in any way conflict with the commercial and shipping interests, for whose benefit, of course, the piers are primarily designed. If any such interference were probable, it could be at once obviated by the simple expedient of building the road-bed of the proposed railway on a lower level than that of the piers along the water's edge, only so far above high-tide mark as necessary to insure stability to the track. In this way, so far from being an obstruction to wharfingers and shipping men, such a railway would be a very great benefit, by the facilities it would offer for immediate and easy transportation of freight without breaking bulk.

To the public at large, of course, its main advantage would lie in the release it would offer from the dirt and misery of over-crowded, sweltering, slow, and generally intolerable horse-cars. In spite of the censure heaped on the companies, they are not altogether to blame. These street-car corporations have certainly sins enough to answer for; they are for the most part as grasping, intolerant, and selfish as need be. But now, when under the stimulus of Mr. READE'S last novel, we are all putting ourselves in each other's places, it is only just to look at this matter of over-crowding from the standpoint of the companies. They say that the difficulty is beyond their control, and regulated by sheer necessity; that running all the cars they can find room for on their tracks, it would still be impossible to accommodate one-half, or, on some roads, one-quarter of the traveling public, if they were to be restricted to the number of passengers that could be seated. On the Third-avenue road, for example, 160 cars are in use, running, at certain times during the day, at half-minute intervals. With more cars, it is asserted, there would not be room for them to run. And yet, on this very road, the overcrowding is greater and more notorious than on any other in the City. The sincerity of this company's excuses would be more manifest if it were not found every year in the lobby at Albany, persistently fighting every attempt of the Second-avenue Railway Company to transfer its down-town terminus from Peck-slip to the City Hall. This measure would greatly relieve the pressure on the Third-avenue cars, but it would correspondingly lessen the dividends of the Third-avenue Company.

Nevertheless, whatever may be the private motives of interested parties, the fact is clear that our wants have long ago outgrown our present horse-car system. In such a plan of river-side railways, as we speak of, we see our only practicable way to relief. Even this is only a distant hope; it must be many years before a chain of piers can be constructed along our extended water-front worthy of our pretensions and adapted to our needs. But, after all, the time would be no longer than that required for the construction of an under-ground road, while the expense for the railway proper would be infinitely less. Besides, the building of the railway need not wait for the completion of the piers. The road could be built, the tracks laid, the cars running long before this. And, with two such car lines fairly in operation, one on each side of the island, our deficiencies in the matter of local transportation would be fully supplied. If not, the establishment of a line of light steamers, touching at every second pier, say, and running at half hourly intervals from the Battery to Harlem, would assuredly complete the remedy. In fact, no good reason can be assigned except lack of enterprise, why some such device as this has not been put in operation before.

Dogs and the Dog-Days.

The horrible disease that HOMER speaks of in dogs, and ARISTOTLE discredits in men, is more talked of at this season than any other. Whether more or less prevalent in hot weather, it is certain that, as the thermometer rises, it is more widely discussed; and although much of the talk consists in refutations of the "popular prejudice" that connects the frequent occurrence of hydrophobia with the dog-days, there is room for a suspicion that the opponents of that theory do not really believe in their own assertion, but are whistling, as boys do in grave-yards, to keep up their courage. The truth is that, let the statistics be what they may, the public have a greater dread of mad dogs in July and August than in any other months. It is also the fact that the greatest number of unequivocal cases of the disease declare themselves at these times of the year—that is during October and November—which lead to the inference that it was incurred at Midsummer. Common belief often turns out to be right, while scientific arguments are not always infallible; and it is quite probable that this is the case in regard to the season for hydrophobia.

At the quarterly meeting of the Medical Board of the Eastern Dispensary, Dr. GARRISH read a lecture, which, besides sustaining the popular view on this point, contained some important facts and advice. Dr. GARRISH declared that gross errors prevail concerning the signs of madness in the dog, and also concerning remedies for the bite when madness actually exists. He says the rabid dog never has fits, and that epilepsy is a clear proof of the absence of rabies. A mad dog, he also affirms, does not shun the water. "It will stand and lap the water, with no spasm attending the effort to swallow, but swallowing little on account of the invariable paralysis of the muscles about the jaws and throat." "By this sign," Dr. GARRISH adds, "the mad dog may invariably be detected." He strongly disapproves the use of stimulants for the supposed effect of neutralizing the poison of either dogs or reptiles, and recommends instead, excision, escharotics, and the vapor bath. Some interesting statements were made by other physicians present at this lecture. Several among them stated that they had never been called upon to treat a case of hydrophobia; and the apothecary of the dispensary said that while he had frequent applications for relief on account of dog-bites, he had known of no instance of hydrophobia resulting from them. The general experience seemed to corroborate authentic records which show the proportion of cases of hydrophobia to be small as compared with population, although it was admitted that certain districts at given times have been peculiarly subject to it. The number of bites a rabid dog has to inflict for one fatal result has some analogy to the number of bullets required to kill one individual in battle. Only one in from twenty-one to twenty-five persons bitten by such animals, has been found to suffer from hydrophobia.

It is, nevertheless, proper to be cautious, not only at this, but at all seasons. Children should be prevented from playing too much with dogs, and it is wise, even with the trustiest canine favorites, to shut them up in a cool, shady place during the heat of the day. It is a merciful act to keep dogs out of the sun in hot weather, and with a good supply of fresh water there is very little danger of their contracting the most horrible of all the maladies to which they are liable.

It is not yet war—but we can scarcely say it is peace. Amid all the talk of "good offices" and "pacific settlements," Europe resounds with the tramp of armies. Every day the sparks seem to fly nearer to the magazine. Prussia is ready for the fight, and France seems to have made up its mind that the hour for striking the blow has come. The affair of Prince LEOPOLD was only a link in a chain of circumstances which has rendered the arbitrament of the sword almost the only alternative left open to either of the great Powers now preparing to spring at each other's throats. It is possible, of course, that the cloud may pass away. But, in the meantime, we have before us the ominous fact that France and Prussia are standing before each other fully equipped for battle. If any man says there is no danger in that state of affairs, he must have greater confidence in the "chapter of accidents" that we profess to entertain.

It would be a great disgrace to Congress if it adjourned without taking the necessary steps for the readmission of Georgia, and yet that seems likely to be the barren issue of all its discussions on the question. There is not a single good reason to be adduced against the restoration of Georgia, but the obstinacy of one or two Senators threatens to place Congress in a false position before the country. Our Washington correspondent tells us that the President is advised that he may order an election in Georgia next Fall, but this would not compensate for the failure of Congress to do its duty. Is it impossible, at this eleventh hour, to prevail upon the Senate to act in a rational manner on this question?

The Apportionment bill has provoked the bitter hostility of the Western members of the House, for reasons which we have already carefully explained to our readers. The measure would evidently be productive of much harm in its present shape, and no one ought to be sorry to learn that it is likely to die a natural death. There is no time to permit of any active movement in its favor. Indeed, the work of Congress, for good or ill, is nearly done. It would be a great mistake to prolong the session even for twenty-four hours.

Our readers will be glad to learn that Mr. DORMAN B. EATON is deriving much benefit from his visit to Europe. The blow which was dealt to him by some cowardly assassin—still, unfortunately, undiscovered—seriously affected his entire nervous system, but under the influence of change of scene and perfect rest, he is gradually recovering his strength. He intends to visit St. Petersburg this fall, and hopes to resume the practice of his profession next Spring. A valuable year has thus been struck out of a most useful life, but it is some satisfaction to learn that there is a good prospect of Mr. EATON'S eventual restoration to health.

The Funding bill, as arranged by the Conference Committee, and adopted yesterday by both Houses, will test Mr. BOUTWELL'S ability to float bonds bearing a lower rate of interest than is now paid by the Government. It provides for a thousand millions of four per cents, $300,000,000 of four and a half per cents, and $200,000,000 of five per cents, and limits the expense of their negotiation to one-half of one per cent. The foreign agency clause has been abandoned, and the gold-banking clause, which would have defeated one purpose of the Currency bill, has also been dropped. These omissions are improvements. The gold-deposit section of the House bill has been retained in a modified shape, and is now the only objectionable feature of the scheme.

A number of ladies, whose names will be familiar to the public, have interested themselves in preparing a petition to Congress for the purpose of protesting against an extension of the suffrage to women. They state their opinions in a very concise, but very forcible manner, and it will, perhaps, be admitted that they have as much right to be heard as the ladies who advocate the other side of the question. The petitioners declare that they already find, as women, "a full measure of duties, cares, and responsibilities devolving" upon them, and therefore are unwilling to undertake political burdens. They also urge that no "general law, affecting the condition of all women, should be framed to meet exceptional discontent"—a very weighty argument. The other reasons given by these ladies for their petition commend themselves to common sense, and may even make an impression on those who are inclined to believe that the exercise of the franchise is a certain remedy for all the evils incidental to life.

We are glad to see that the bill elevating the Internal Revenue Bureau into a department, and creating a Cabinet position for the Commissioner, with duties and powers that would trespass largely upon the functions of the Secretary of the Treasury, is not likely to become law. We say this with no unkind feeling toward Mr. DELANO, and no lack of appreciation of the industry and ability he has displayed. Circumstances, however, are unfavorable to a change which would entail an expense not warranted by the requirements of the revenue service. A reduction of the internal revenue staff should follow the large reduction of taxes. The Tax bill authorizes the President to promote retrenchment in this respect, and his action will be awaited with some anxiety.

The "chewers and spitters" do not, we fear, read Mr. BEECHER'S "Lecture-room Talks"—if they did, they would find a few broad hints addressed to themselves in this week's portion, as published in the Christian Union. The chewer of tobacco, says Mr. BEECHER, "smells scarcely less strong than a polecat, and spits wherever he goes, and dirties the dress of every woman that comes near him." "When I go into the cars or boats," Mr. BEECHER continues, "where they are, and see what puddles they leave, I feel as though, if I had the liberty of doing by them as we do by poodles, I would take them by the neck and rub their noses in their own filth." It is much to be regretted that Mr. BEECHER cannot have his own way for once.

While the noble sport of yachting has found many votaries in this country, few, if any, of our adventurous spirits have taken kindly to the canoe. Yet there are many temptations, for those who like to spend a Summer's holiday a little out of the beaten track, to go on solitary expeditions in search of health and pleasure. The owner of the famous Rob Roy has set the example, and in the very amusing narrative of his journeyings in the East, just published by the Messrs. HARPERS, he gives full directions for the necessary equipment of a boat capable of making long voyages in perfect safety. Why not form a canoe club in this City? If Commodore STEBBINS, who has done so much for our yacht club, would only take the enterprise in hand, he would very soon find a goodly muster of young men rallying to his flag. We should then be able to give even the owner of the Rob Roy a hint how to build canoes.

The Sun makes a judicious and seasonable suggestion in favor of the establishment of a "Home for worn-out Workwomen." Our contemporary alludes to the fact that as our existing benevolent institutions are organized, there are neither houses of mercy nor refuge for women who are worn out with honest toil. Desirable as it is to supply such a want, it must not be forgotten that public opinion has a duty to perform with reference to employers who render it imperative that a woman should work fourteen hours a day in order to earn a livelihood. Supply and demand have nothing to do with a question like this—common humanity calls for the removal of so gross an abuse. If we cannot have another TOM HOOD to perform for the white slaves of New-York what the first did for the seamstresses of London, we can at least call upon society to interfere for the protection of those who are too weak to protect themselves.

Considering the anxiety felt in the City from time to time on the subject of the Croton supply, it may be worth while to consider whether the inexhaustible Hudson might not be called on to furnish water for every civic purpose, except drinking, washing, and cookery. This is a question which will occur to the public mind more and more with the growth of population. With North River water at discretion, drawn up by machinery and distributed from a tank, there need be no more warnings and expostulations on the subject of Croton in dry weather. Water could then be used without stint, either to flush the sewers or clean the thoroughfares, or furnish a hundred ornamental street-basins, with their foaming and sparkling fountains for the general refreshment. Our noble river is not yet put to half its proper uses; and the day will probably come when water from it will be filtered for all purposes. It would come all the sooner if, instead of making "sinks" of the bright rivers, we returned the refuse of cities and towns to the fields, to increase our crops and harvests.

The Darien Canal Treaty—Progress of the Colombian Congress.

Private advices from Bogota, dated June 18, one day later than those brought by the regular mail, state that the Darien Canal treaty had passed the House and would be returned to the Senate for concurrence. It was generally believed that in its present amended condition it would be unacceptable to the United States Government

COMMENCEMENT AT AMHERST.

Opening of the Week—The Boat Racing—Prize Declamation—The Prize List—Names of the Happy Fellows—Class Day.

From Our Special Correspondent.

AMHERST, Wednesday Night, July 13, 1870.

Commencement week began with the baccalaureate sermon by President STEARNS, delivered in College Hall at 3 o'clock Sunday afternoon. The sermon was of a character totally different from that of last year, which gave much practical advice to the students. The text was taken from Proverbs, twenty-fourth chapter, fifth verse, and the drift of the discourse was to show that education tends to the advance of religion. Sunday evening an address was delivered before the Hitchcock Society of Inquiry by Prof. G. N. WEBBER, of Middlebury College. The subject matter was not essentially different from that of President STEARNS' in the afternoon. One statement of the Professor ought to be modified, as it was far from the truth. He could not have chosen a less appropriate epithet to apply to HUMBOLDT than "Godless." Those who were intimate with that great man during his latter days positively affirm that he did have a strong belief in the existence of a God, and the fact that he was not noted as a Christian is to be explained by his great devotion to his chosen and much-loved science. No man of HUMBOLDT'S character and attainments could fail, as he did not, to see something more than mere chance in the natural objects which were his life study.

THE BOAT-RACE.

Monday forenoon the great attraction was the boat-race on the Connecticut River, four miles from the College. Item first on the programme was a race between a single scull, rowed by J. A. BARNES, of Springfield, and a boat rowed by a motley crew of students. The race was not timed at all, BARNES coming in a long way ahead, besides stopping to wait for his competitors on the course. The length of the course is three miles, and is a first-rate one for boat-racing. Item number two was a tub-race, for which there were eight entries. The prize was a tin medal, the successful competitor swimming in and towing his tub after him. The real race of the forenoon lay between the University and Freshmen crews. The stroke oarsman of the University crew was J. A. BARNES, of Springfield; of the Freshmen crew, L. J. WARNER, of Northampton. The Freshmen took the lead from the start, and came in about three-quarters of a mile ahead of the University crew. The judges were F. D. LEWIS, a graduate of the class of 1869, and H. A. DAVENPORT, a member of the class of 1870. The race over, the crowd dispersed. The Freshmen crew row at Worcester, on Lake Quinsigamond, on the 22d, against the Freshmen crews of Yale, Harvard and Brown. The time yesterday was nineteen minutes and fifty-two seconds, and if they improve as fast the next ten days as in the last ten, somebody will have some smart rowing to do to whip them.

PRIZE SPEAKING.

Speaking for the Hyde Prize commenced at 3 o'clock Monday afternoon. This prize is something new, having been established during the last year. The amount is $100, and is offered for the best speaking and writing in the Senior Class. It is awarded by HENRY D. HYDE, of Boston, a graduate of the College in the class of '61. The programme was as follows:

"Mormonism"—S. L. GRAVES, Groton; "Character of MIRABEAU"—T. J. MARSH, Leominster; "The Independence We Need"—H. B. RICE, Knoxville, Tenn.; "Influence"—W. N. NOBLE, Trumansburg, N. Y.; "Eloquence of True Manhood"—J. E. MILLER, Amherst; "Puritanism of the Nineteenth Century"—C. H. AMES, Chicago, Ill.; "When Mercy Seasons Justice"—W. K. WICKES, Albany, N. Y.; "Religious Intolerance"—A. J. TITSWORTH, New-Market, N. J.

Nearly all of the speakers did well, so that the awarding of the prize was a difficult matter. C. H. AMES of Chicago, Ill., was the successful contestant. Monday evening, the regular declamation for the Sweetser Prizes occurred. The speakers were five from the Sophomore and five from the Freshman Class. The following was the programme.

Of the Freshmen, HAYWARD took the first prize, and BRADLEY the second. BANCROFT, of the Sophomores, took the first, and HALL the second. If it were in order to notice such things, mention should be made of the prayer, a model of brevity and point rarely heard at such places. Last year the speaking was of a different and altogether better stamp than this; and this year the Freshmen put the Sophomores in the shade. The speaking was dry and tedious to an unusual degree.

THE PRIZE LIST.

The prize list of the year is out, and the men who go home loaded with glory and money—about as much of one as the other, and both good for nothing compared with what it cost to gain them—are classed below:

SENIOR CLASS—Phi Beta Kappa prize of $40, given by the Phi Beta Kappa Society, "for proficiency in the studies of the philosophical department during the Senior year, in such direction as the Faculty may from year to year determine," is divided between T. J. MARSH, of Leominster, and G. E. SUTHERLAND, of Ripon, Wis.

The Woods prize of $60 for general culture and improvement is carried off by A. J. TITSWORTH, of New-Market, N. J. The Hardy prizes of $50, $30 and $20 for improvement in extemporaneous speaking, were taken respectively by W. K. WICKES, of Albany, N. Y., A. J. TITSWORTH, of New-Market, N. J., and H. TYLER, of Amherst; prize of $30 for greatest improvement in Greek, freshman year, HENRY GIBBONS, of Brownsville, Penn.; mathematical prizes—$25 to F. H. LOUD, of Weymouth; $15 to A. N. HEAP, of Chicago, Ill.; Sweetzer declamation prizes—$10 to JAMES HAYWARD, of Hannibal, Mo.; $5 to L. BRADLEY, Jr., of Methuen.

This completes the list. The names of the disappointed would make a much longer roll.

CLASS DAY EXERCISES.

A hot, uncomfortable crowd filled College Hall at 2 o'clock, Tuesday afternoon, to hear the class-day oration and poem. Having class-day in Commencement week is an innovation, never having been done before this year. Many of the students do not like the arrangement, much preferring the old way of having it come four weeks before Commencement. The exercises passed off in good order, and the speakers did themselves credit. The oration was a vigorous defense of the young man. The poem, although long for such a hot day, will compare favorably with any within the last five years—we might go further back, if we only remembered, and is better than some that have been delivered from that stage. "Jappy's" remarks were sound, judging by the applause, not by the sense. He spoke easily, volubly, put in all the gestures, after the most approved style of the American student, and made considerable laughter. The grove exercises passed off in the usual jolly fashion, the oration being as original as it is possible to make so old a subject as they are limited to. The following was the programme:

Music.—Prayer.—Music.
Oration—"Young Men in History"—A. J. Titsworth, New-Market, N. J.
Music.
Poem—"Glimpses"—W. K. Wickes, Albany, N. Y.
Oration in Japanese—Joseph Nee Sima.
Singing of Ode by the Class.

EXERCISES IN THE GROVE.

Ivy Oration—W. N. Noble, Trumansburg, N. Y.
Ivy Ode—Sung by the class, F. F. Coburn, Lowell, Mass.
Grove Oration—W. H. Swift, Unionville, N. Y.
"Pipe of parting."

The planting of the ivy is a new item in the bill of fare for Class Day. It was planted by the Walker building, every member of the class throwing in a handful of soil. After the exercises in the grove were over the friends of the graduating class were invited to ice-cream, cake and a dance on the green. Some partook of the first, all that could, and no one complained of cruel neglect, some of the last, some of all. In the evening came the concert by the Mendelssohns. The hall was well filled, and, what was better, the music was appreciated. Mr. HENRY SUCK played in place of CARL NEISEL, unavoidably absent. The remaining exercises of the week are: At 9 A. M., Wednesday, Alumni meeting; at 3 P. M., address before the Social Union, by EDWIN P. WHIPPLE, of Boston; in the evening, social gathering of the Alumni in College Hall, and on Thursday the grand finale of Commencement proper, ending with the valedictory. Thursday night the class eat their class supper at the Parker House, Boston. Then they separate for ever.

EXECUTIVE SESSION.

At 2 o'clock the Senate went into Executive session.

THE DEFICIENCY BILL RESUMED.

The Executive session was continued until 8 o'clock, when the doors were reopened, and the Senate took up the Deficiency Appropriation bill.

The amendments reported from the Committee on Appropriations, including $15,000 for the annual repairs of the Treasury building, and $10,000 for the support of primary schools in the District of Columbia outside of Washington and Georgetown, were adopted. Amendments were proposed and adopted, appropriating $67,000 in coin to pay the Peruvian Government on the claim of a citizen of that Government named MONTANA; $30,000 for compensation to employes at the Assay Office at New-York. The bill then passed.

During the evening a bill was passed exempting pork-packers, lard-renderers and persons engaged in smoking hams from the internal tax as manufacturers.

At 11½ o'clock the Senate went into Executive Session for a few minutes, and then adjourned.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

Mr. BINGHAM, from the Judiciary Committee, reported a resolution authorizing the Sergeant-at-Arms, or his assistant, to take PATRICK WOOD, now in jail for a breach of privilege of the House, to Richmond, Va., to testify in a murder case, and after testifying, to return him to the jail of the District of Columbia. Adopted.

DISABILITIES REMOVED.

On motion of Mr. MCKEE, the Senate bill removing the civil and political disabilities of A. C. REYNOLDS, of Corinth, Miss., was passed.

THE WEST POINT COLORED CADET.

The House then took up the motion made yesterday by Mr. BUTLER, of Massachusetts, to suspend the rules, and adopt a resolution directing the House visitors to West Point to investigate the complaint made as to the ill-treatment of the colored cadet at the Military Academy.

Mr. FARNSWORTH objected to the provision in the resolution relating to a stenographer and clerk. Mr. BUTLER withdrew that part of the resolution. The resolution was then adopted—yeas 107, nays 51.

The House visitors to West Point are Messrs. SCHENCK, LOGAN and SLOCUM.

THE APPORTIONMENT BILL.

Mr. SLOCUM moved to suspend the rules in order to take from the Speaker's table the Senate amendment to the House bill to fix the time for the election of Representatives in Congress. He announced his intention to move to non-concur in the amendment and to ask for a Committee of Conference. [The Senate amendment increases the number of Representatives to 300.] The motion was rejected—yeas 94, nays 97.

NEW CONFERENCE COMMITTEES.

On motion of Mr. DAWES, the Senate amendments to the Miscellaneous Appropriation bill were taken from the Speaker's table and nonconcurred in, in gross, and referred to a Conference Committee. Messrs. DAWES, PECK and SARGENT were appointed.

A Conference Committee was also ordered on the Army Appropriation bill. And subsequently Messrs. DICKEY, LOGAN and ARCHER were appointed.

THE RIVER AND HARBOR BILL.

Mr. STOKES moved to suspend the rules and pass a joint resolution ordering $80,000 of the amount appropriated in the River and Harbor bill, for the improvement of the Tennessee River, to be expended for the repair and completion of the works between Knoxville and Chattanooga, and for the continuation of the works now in progress below Chattanooga, including the Muscle Shoals. Agreed to.

REPORTS FROM COMMITTEES.

Mr. FINCKELENBERG, from the Committee on Commerce, reported a bill to create a port of delivery at Houston, Texas. Passed.

Also a like bill for Council Bluffs, Iowa. The House refused to suspend the rules for the passage of the bill—yeas 108, nays 67, not two-thirds, in the affirmative.

Mr. LAWRENCE, from the Reconstruction Committee, reported a bill removing political disabilities of VERNON H. VAUGHN, of Tuscaloosa, Ala. Passed.

Mr. WASHBURN, of Massachusetts, from the Committee on Claims, reported a bill for the settlement of the accounts of RICHARD R. PEEBLES, late Collector of the Port of Galveston, Texas. Passed.

Mr. INGERSOLL, from the Committee on Commerce, reported a resolution instructing a Subcommittee of Commerce to make investigations during the recess into the tariffs and exclusive rights of ocean telegraph companies connected with the United States, and of the land lines connected therewith, with power to send for persons, papers, &c. [Mr. SCOFIELD objected to a committee sitting during the recess. The country had had enough of that last year. Mr. INGERSOLL moved to suspend the rules, but the House refused.]

THE TAX AND TARIFF.

Mr. SCHENCK, from the Conference Committee on the Tax and Tariff Bill, made a report. The report having been read at length, Mr. SCHENCK proceeded to explain it. The bill, he said, was not just what perhaps any member desired. He could very frankly say for himself that there were a number of things in it which did not command his entire assent, but all little difficulties were sunk in the general character and value of the bill itself as a leading measure. Trying the bill by the complete returns for the last fiscal year, he calculated that this bill would reduce internal taxes fifty million dollars and the Customs receipts twenty-seven millions. He would not hesitate to say that the reduction to be effected by this bill compared with the receipts of last year would be over eighty millions of dollars. He regretted that the House had assented to the first amendment of the Senate, which struck out seventy-five pages, more than half of the House bill, including special taxes on brokers and bankers and their sales. Hereafter all Wall-street operations would be free from any burden whatever, and a source of revenue from which millions had been, and might be, obtained without interfering with any of the fair legitimate industry of the country, was swept away. He should always believe that the House had in that matter acted somewhat unadvisedly. Perhaps it was partly his own fault in having moved the previous question, and thus put himself in a condition where he had only four or five minutes to explain the matter. But he thought it was still more the fault or mistake of the gentlemen who led the House in that direction under influences which they perhaps did not know of themselves, for it was within his knowledge that the theater men and brokers and lottery men were very busy that morning about the House and in the lobbies. It had been said by the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. SCOFIELD) that the House had ought to agree to that amendment, lest, perhaps, the Chairman of the Committee of Ways and Means would be so obstinate that probably the bill would fail altogether. He did not know what his personal character in that respect might be. His convictions were usually very strong, but he ordinarily arrived at them by some attempt to understand the subject. He did not think, however, that the gentleman from Pennsylvania could convict him before the House of being a pig-headed abstractionist, or a standing objector against anything that might be presented for consideration. He did not believe that it was fair to have thrown aside the laborious, careful, pains-taking work of months on such a pretext as that. This brought him down to a statement of what was left in the bill. It consisted almost altogether of details of reduction of internal taxes, of some modification of the provisions of the law relating to the collection of the taxes, and of other details in relation to import duties. It took a number of articles from the present list of dutiable articles, and arranged the duties on them, for the most part making a considerable reduction in the duty, and in some instances raising the duty, and it took another large number of articles from the dutiable list and put them on the free list. He offered, in conclusion, to answer any inquiries that might be put to him respecting any particular item in the bill.

Mr. INGERSOLL asked if there had been any modification made in the proposed duty on Bessemer steel.

Mr. SCHENCK explained that that was not a subject of conference. The Committee of Ways and Means had originally reported a duty of two cents per pound on Bessemer steel rails, and the House had reduced it to one and three-fourths cents. The Senate had reduced it to one and a quarter cents, and the House had concurred in that amendment.

Mr. BROOKS, of New-York, repeated what he had said early in the session, that the reduction of revenue should be at least $100,000,000, and that the Treasury could well submit to that reduction without any danger of a want of money to support the Government and to pay the interest on the public debt. By the ingenious reduction of the duty on tea, sugar, coffee and spices, the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. SCHENCK) and those associated with him on the high tariff side of the House, had continued to raise the existing duty on almost all other articles, and thus levy additional burdens on the people. There was an increase of duty of wools on the skin; on flax, hackeled or dressed; on pig-iron, ($7 per ton;) on wrought scrap-iron, ($7 to $8 per ton;) on sword-blades; on steel bars, and on Bessemer steel, the control of which was in the hands of three trustees, who had the patent for twelve years. The duty on wire was enormously increased, mainly for the benefit of a large manufactory in Worcester, Mass. It was a bonus of at least $300,000 to that Worcester manufactory. The duty had been increased on telegraph wire, millstone, building stone and marble. There was a large increase of duty on hair-cloth exclusively for the benefit of a thriving little village in Rhode Island. This country had once supplied furniture to all the West Indies, Central America and South America, and even some to Europe, but now the duty on hair-cloth was so enormous that hair-cloth seated chairs or sofas were no longer exported.

Mr. BANKS remarked that Mr. BROOKS was entirely mistaken in supposing that there was an increase of duty on hair-cloth, for he had just received a dispatch from hair-cloth manufacturers in his own district stating that the proposed change would be disastrous to their business, and asking him to resist it in their names.

Mr. ALLISON hoped that Mr. BANKS would resist it.

Mr. BROOKS hopes so too. He went on to show that the duty was increased on hair-pins and ornaments for dresses; gun wads, for the benefit of some manufacturer in Massachusetts; nickel, linseed-oil, cotton yarn, &c. He asked where was the abolition of the duty on salt, leather, beef, timber, lead, copper, blankets and woolens; it was nowhere to be found in the bill, nothing whatever had been done for the consumer. He warned the monopolists that this bill would not stand. Never were monopolists so blinded when they bled the people too much and roused them into the discovery of the wrongs inflicted upon them.

Mr. MAYNARD inquired of Mr. BROOKS where he would raise the necessary revenue.

Mr. BROOKS replied that he had stated his views on that point in the speech which he made at the opening of the session. More revenue could be collected from thirty leading articles than form the 2,500 or three thousand articles in the existing tariff. He declared that the farmers in the West were rising in mass on the subject of the tariff, and that the Republican farmers of the South would send Representatives to Congress who would reflect the views of the people.

Mr. SCHENCK remarked that he had often heard that same old speech, but could not say that he had ever liked it. They had been admonished by the leading Democratic organ of the gentleman, and of the Gentleman's City, that he was to traverse the country with hoes and gridirons, and from them draw an argument to teach the people how much they were oppressed. He apprehended that the people of the country, including the farmers, understood hoes better than he (Mr. BROOKS) did. He might know much more of the gridiron or frying-pan, because it was not impossible that he had derived more comfort from them than the hoes.

Mr. COX spoke against the Conference report. The report was agreed to—yeas 143, nays 49.

THE FUNDING BILL.

Mr. SCHENCK, from the Conference Committee on the Funding bill, made a report stating that it was precisely the same as that made yesterday, and printed in to-day's Globe, except the seventh section requiring the new national banks to deposit the new bonds as a guarantee for their circulation, which section was now omitted. The report having been read in full was agreed to—yeas 137, nays 35.

THE USE OF WHISKY METERS.

Mr. MAYNARD, from the Committee on Ways and Means, reported the joint resolution suspending the use of whisky meters at distilleries till the further action of Congress.

Mr. GARFIELD inquired of Mr. MAYNARD whether there was any purpose to raise the duty on spirits at this session, stating he had information that large quantities were being held on speculation, and that the price had gone up in the confident anticipation of something of that sort being done in the closing hours of the session.

Mr. MAYNARD replied, in very positive terms, that no such proposition had been or would be entertained by the Committee of Ways and Means, and that if it were, it would be acted upon adversely.

Mr. DICKEY advocated the joint resolution as being intended to get rid of a first-class humbug and fraud. The joint resolution was passed.

GENERAL AMNESTY BILL.

Mr. FARNSWORTH moved to suspend the rules and pass a General Amnesty bill, excluding from its benefits graduates of the Military or Naval Academies, members of Congress, heads of Departments, &c., who had given aid and comfort to the rebellion.

Mr. WARD asked whether the bill was a report from the Reconstruction Committee.

Mr. BUTLER, of Massachusetts, remarked that it was not; the member from Illinois had changed the report of the Committee.

The motion was rejected by yeas 74, nays 101.

THE SOUTHERN PACIFIC RAILROAD.

Mr. SCHENCK moved to suspend the rules, in order to take from the Speaker's table the Southern Pacific Railroad bill.

Mr. INGERSOLL suggested that the Air-Line Railroad bill be included in the motion.

Mr. RANDALL—Yes, and ever other job.

Mr. MAYNARD appealed to the members to give the friends of the Southern Pacific Railroad bill a hearing.

Mr. ELDRIDGE moved that the House adjourn. Negatived—64 to 113.

The rules were not suspended—yeas 75, nays 103.

CHARGES AGAINST GEN. HOWARD.

Mr. ARNELL, from the Committee on Education and Labor, made a report in the case of the investigation of the charges against Gen. HOWARD, and asked that the majority and minority resolutions be read, and the reports ordered to be printed, stating that he would call them up for action at 1 o'clock to-morrow.

Mr. INGERSOLL remarked that there was no time now to take up these reports.

The Speaker intimated that it would be well nigh impossible to have a discussion on the matter to-morrow, and that action could be taken on the resolutions now as well as then.

After some suggestions in the midst of much disorder, the majority and minority resolutions were read.

The majority resolutions declare that the policy pursued by the United States toward 4,500,000 of people, suddenly enfranchised by the events of a great civil war, in seeking to provide for their education to render them independent and self-supporting, and in extending to them civil and political equality, is a source of just national pride, and that the House acquits Major-Gen. O. O. HOWARD of the groundless and causeless charges lately preferred against him, and declares and records its judgment that in successfully organizing and administering with fidelity, integrity and ability the Freedmen's Bureau, which has contributed so much to the accomplishment of the first two of those great ends, he is deserving of the gratitude of the American people.

The report is signed by the Chairman, Mr. ARNELL, and by Messrs. Beatty, Roar, Townsend, Hamilton, Burdett, Tyner and Perce.

The resolutions reported by the minority, Messrs. MCNEELY and ROGERS, direct that a copy of the testimony be referred to the Secretary of War, with directions to order a Court-martial for the trial of Gen. HOWARD, and recommend the passage of a joint resolution directing the Secretary of War to take the necessary measures to secure the interests of the Government in the Howard University, its buildings and grounds, and the lands held by that corporation, which were paid for by the public funds, and directing the Secretary of the Treasury to take the necessary measures to recover any moneys drawn by Gen. HOWARD from the United States Treasury as Commissioner of the Freedmen's Bureau, and disbursed as aid of churches, religious associations and educational institutions, not in pursuance of law.

Both reports and the evidence, covering nearly 4,000 pages, were ordered to be printed.

The question then being on assigning to-morrow for the consideration of the matter, much opposition was made to the assignment, and, without disposing of the question, the House, at 4¾, adjourned.

CHINESE LABOR.

Lecture Before the Liberal Club, by W. L. Ormsby, Jr.

A stated meeting of the New-York Liberal Club was held, last evening, at the Club-room, No. 23 Third-avenue. After the transaction of the usual formal business, the lecturer of the evening, Mr. W. L. ORMSBY, Jr., was introduced and delivered an interesting address upon the question of Chinese labor. The following is an abstract of this address: It is, said he, a lasting shame and disgrace to American manhood, that the mere fact of seventy-five Chinese going to work at North Adams, Mass., to earn an honest living, has raised a storm of indignation throughout the country. The army of reporters that has watched these seventy-five Chinese has not been able to furnish, from the conduct of these foreigners, a single excuse for the inhuman brutality and unmanly fear which have been evoked by their presence—a brutality and fear manifested mainly by the lowest order of our population, goaded to acts of violence—perhaps of murder—by demagogues and politicians. The absurd allegation that these seventy-five Chinese are slaves, is unworthy of a moment's credence, and is only made to cloak the unwarranted opposition to their honest labor—an opposition which is solely due to the fact that they are working for much less wages than have been contemptuously refused by the Trade union Society of Crispins. Mass meetings have been held throughout the country, and stirring appeals have issued for Government interference to prevent Chinese immigration. To whom is given the right to deny the Chinese access to our country? Is it to the sons of our forefathers who outraged and murdered our native Indians? Or is it to the hordes of Europeans who have emigrated hither under the sops of our laws? What right have any foreigners here which do not belong equally to the Chinese? If our civilization has withstood and benefitted other emigration and the negro, there is little fear that it will suffer from the Chinese. It is an ineffaceable blot upon our history that the highest legislative body in the nation, ignoring all the time-honored traditions of our history; ignoring our perpetual boast that the land is open for the oppressed of all nations, such have taken such an infamous step to impede the flow of immigration—a step only paralleled by the acts of GEORGE III., complained of in the Declaration of Independence. China cannot furnish a lower class of immigrants than we have already had. The seventy-five who have raised the disturbance are quite up to the average standard in all the qualities that make good citizens. There is not a single objection against the cheapness of their labor that has not been worn threadbare and proved false a century ago, when applied to labor saving machines. Neither the cheap labor of Chinese, nor of labor-saving machines can be anything but a benefit to humanity, because they increase production. Cheap labor must be cheap goods. That is an inexorable law of trade that it is not worth while to argue. While cheap shoemaking is temporarily unfortunate for the Crispins, who make shoes, it is of lasting benefit to the millions who wear shoes, and the Crispins must find something else to do, as they would if they had been displaced by a machine. The railroad and telegraph have forced the Chinese to our doors, and the Crispins can no more fight against the legitimate results of these modern inventions than they could against the railroad, the cotton-gin, or the sewing-machine, which, though a slight temporary hardship for laborers, were a vast and permanent good to all humanity. It is claimed that because the manufacturers have had protection therefore the workmen should be protected by the exclusion of competition. But the protective system of government has been exploded by the most advanced modern thought, and if pursued as proposed could only end in the care of each individual's daily welfare, to the exclusion of individual effort. The way to correct the protective system is to abolish it. Let there be a grand natural division of labor among the nations, each availing itself of the commerce and free trade of the advantages of the others. The Chinese might then be able to exchange labor with us more advantageously by staying at home. What do the Chinese come for except to better their condition? Is not that a laudable object? If they are content to take less than what others refuse, what right have the others to complain? The Crispins should not have refused good wages until they were sure of getting better. We are asked to sympathize with the Crispins as against their employers. But do not the Crispins oppress in turn those below them, the non-unionists and Chinese, who by threats are intimidated from the performance of honest labor? We are asked to sympathize with the Crispins on account of their families. But the wages of labor cannot be regulated by the needs of families. It may be a hard thing, in political economy, but it is true that the labor of a single man is worth just as much as that of a married man. A man can't demand more wages because he has indulged in the luxury of a wife and children! Indeed, having families, the Crispins were bound to accept the best wages they could get, otherwise they will be led to oppose competition by violence or oppressive laws or become objects of charity. The speaker earnestly insisted that the Chinese should be left to enjoy their rights here and do as they please, provided they leave others undisturbed in the same rights. In conclusion, he ridiculed the idea which had been put forth by some, that the Chinese Empire is about to pour forth its millions of the Asiatic race to outbid our workmen. There was no attempt to establish coolie labor here or slavery in any form.

After the address, the subject of Chinese labor in this country was briefly discussed by Messrs. WAKEMAN, Drs. DONAGE and VANDERWIDER; a Chinaman named KING, Mr. ARMENT, of Nevada, Mr. GREGORY, Mr. ORMSBY, Jr., and others.

The petition of the undersigned, to the Congress of the United States, protesting against an extension of suffrage to women:

We, the undersigned, do hereby appeal to your honorable body, and desire respectfully to enter our protest against an extension of suffrage to women; and in the firm belief that our petition represents the sober convictions of the majority of the women of the country.

Although we shrink from the notoriety of the public eye, yet we are too deeply and painfully impressed by the grave perils which threaten our peace and happiness in these proposed changes in our civil and political rights longer to remain silent.

Because, Holy Scripture inculcates a different, and for us higher sphere, apart from public life.

Because, as women we find a full measure of duties, cares and responsibilities devolving upon us, and we are therefore unwilling to bear other and heavier burdens, and those unsuited to our physical organization.

Because, we hold that an extension of suffrage would be adverse to the interests of the working women of the country, with whom we heartily sympathize.

Because these changes must introduce a fruitful element of discord in the existing marriage relation, which would tend to the infinite detriment of children, and increase the already alarming prevalence of divorce throughout the land.

Because no general law, affecting the condition of all women, should be framed to meet exceptional discontents.

For these, and many more reasons, do we beg of your wisdom that no law extending suffrage to women may be passed, as the passage of such a law would be fraught with danger so grave to the general order of the country.

A New Railroad from Milford to Matamoras, Penn.

For some time past the project of building a railroad from Milford, Penn., to Matamoras, Penn., and thence across the Delaware River, connecting with the Erie Railway, has been much talked of, and yesterday the matter assumed a practical shape by the organization of a stock company, to be known as the Milford and Matamoras Railroad Company. The Erie Railway Company, by reason of certain privileges granted to them by the Pennsylvania Legislature, are bound to pay to that State $10,000 per year, which they have done since 1848. The Legislature, in session last Winter, by a special act, granted this money to the building and maintaining the Milford and Matamoras Railroad. With this inducement a few capitalists have within the past few days subscribed to the stock, sufficient to build the road, and yesterday met and organized the Company by electing J. H. DIMMICK, President; JOHN C. MOTT, Secretary, and JAS. W. QUICK, Treasurer.

The contract of building the road was awarded Col. H. S. MOTT, of Milford, and he is to commence work immediately. It is expected that the grading will be done by Dec. 1.

The length of the road is eight miles, and it runs through a rich farming country. Milford is the county seat of Pike County, and hitherto has been without railroad communication. The probabilities are that this road will be lengthened by running down the rich and fertile valley of the Delaware, connecting at Easton with a road leading to Philadelphia.

A Monument to Lingard.

A number of the intimate friends of the lamented J. W. LINGARD are making arrangements to erect a monument over his grave. Mr. THEODORE MOSS, of Wallack's, has offered the theater for a matinée performance, and Mr. FRELIGH will give the Bowery Theater for an evening. In the meantime, subscription papers will be circulated, and the following gentlemen are authorized to receive subscriptions:

Theodore Moss, Henry Wood, J. Zimmerman, Neil Bryant, C. O'Connor, J. H. Ford, Wm. B. Freliegh, Wm. Carland, E. L. Murphy, M. L. Finch, N. B. Clark, J. Clute, Wm. Merrifield, A. R. Spencer, Wm. Ganard, J. W. Collier, Charles White, Thomas Ryan, S. H. Smith, Harry Clifton, Ashman & Morton.

THEODORE MOSS is to be the treasurer. Messrs. CHANFRAU, EDDY, N. B. CLARK, FLOYD, and many other actors have offered their assistance at the theatrical entertainments, and, no doubt, a suitable and handsome memorial will be raised over the grave.

Collision on the Erie Railroad.

Yesterday morning about 2 o'clock, a collision occurred between freight train No. 36, bound east, and an extra coal train, at Middaugh's, west of Port Jervis, on the Delaware Division, Erie Railway. The engines of both trains collided, and one of them was damaged pretty badly, and several cars were smashed up. The accident was caused by a switchman turning the switch wrong. The night line passenger train was detained about two hours and a half in consequence. The wreckers were sent from this place, and the track is now clear.

LOCAL NEWS IN BRIEF.

NEW-YORK.

The employes of the Second-avenue Railroad went out for a day's amusement yesterday morning. The gay party crossed the Hudson at Forty-second-street ferry, and proceeded thence to Pleasant Valley. The cortége consisted of nine carriages. The one occupied by the band was drawn by eight gray horses gaily decked with tri-color plumes; the remaining carriages were drawn by four horses each, and one large vehicle contained not only pleasure-seekers but sundry accessories to the creature comforts. The sun shone bright and all things seemed to conspire to make the occasion one of genuine enjoyment; and it was so.

The Pyramid Association, of this City, a society for social enjoyment, held their second annual afternoon and evening picnic at Funk's Union Park, on the foot of Sixty-third-street, East River, yesterday. The picnic was well attended, and was a creditable and happy affair. The music was furnished by O'Brien's Band, and Mr. ROBERT A. LOVE acted as floor manager. The officers of the Association are: Messrs. EDWARD ESLER, President; JOSEPH MCGRAW, Vice President; THOS. BRUCE, Secretary; E. G. R. BIRD, Treasurer.

The five Sioux Indians who are now stopping at the Metropolitan Hotel were shown round the City yesterday by their escort, Major GEORGE M. RANDALL. They visited several stores in the morning, and in the afternoon drove to Central Park. In the evening they visited the theater. Today they go to have their pictures taken, and to-morrow they start for Buffalo and the Plains, perhaps to take part in the annual Summer slaughter of settlers.

The new wharf of the People's Albany and Troy line of steamers, Pier No. 44 North River, foot of Spring-street, is the largest in America. They leave there every afternoon at 6 o'clock, and the foot of West Thirty-fourth-street at 6¼.

The York Lodge, No. 197, Free and Accepted Masons, went on a steam-boat excursion up the Hudson River, yesterday, as far as Dudley Grove, where they held their third annual picnic. The party embarked on board the REAL ESTATE TRANSACTIONS.

Again at the Exchange, yesterday, there were no sales, although a very large number of persons were present, owing to the quality of property advertised to be disposed of by JAMES M. MILLER, consisting of lots located in Westchester County. Five of these were at Tremont, adjoining Ittner's Villa, a place of considerable resort, and from this fact many Germans were in attendance, with the intention of bidding. They were, however, disappointed, for the auctioneer announced that in consequence of a death in the family of one of the owners of the property the sale was indefinitely postponed. The prospect for today at the Exchange is no better than yesterday, and in all probability the week will be an unusually dull one.

Today ROBERTS & MCGUIRE sell a residence, together with twenty-eight very desirable lots, located at Tarrytown. This sale has already been noticed, and had it not been, the location of the property, added to the fact of its being in the market, would give the transaction sufficient publicity. The sale will take place on the ground at 1 P. M., and parties can leave the City as late as 11½ A. M. by the Hudson River Railway.

Today, also, A. D. MELLICK, Jr., & BROS., (O. H. PIERSON, auctioneer,) will continue the sale of lots at Cresskill, N. J., which was adjourned last week by reason of the storm. For this sale a special train will leave the foot of Chambers-street at 11 A. M. All other particulars will be found in the advertising column.

The undersigned offer for sale, at eighty and interest, two hundred and fifty bonds of $1,000 each, issued by the Harlem Extension Railroad Company.

These bonds are the unsold balance of an issue of $500,000, made by the Harlem Extension Railroad Company for the purpose of completing the equipment of their road, and are secured by a first mortgage on said equipment, made to the Union Trust Company of New-York. They bear interest at the rate of seven per cent. per annum, payable semi-annually, free of Government tax, and are payable on March 1, 1880.

The Harlem Extension Railroad connects with the Harlem Railroad at Chatham Four Corners and extends from that point to Rutland, Vermont.

PROPOSALS.

PROPOSALS

FOR THE CONSTRUCTION OF A STEAM PROPELLER OF IRON FOR THE COAST SURVEY.

COAST SURVEY OFFICE,
WASHINGTON, D. C., June 27, 1870.

Separate sealed proposals will be received at this office until 12 o'clock, July 20, for building a steam propeller of iron, for Coast Survey service, of the size of 250 tons, O. M., below main deck.

Measurements, for tonnage according to old Custom-house rules, taking the length on the load-line from forward part of stem to after-part of forward stern post, breadth of beam molded and depth of hold from under part of deck to top of ceiling.

General specifications and plans of arrangement and general style of the vessel, will be furnished bidders on application to the Collector of Customs, Boston, New-York and Philadelphia, and to this office.

A guaranteed speed of eight knots an hour, under steam alone, in a trial trip at sea, for a distance of not less than 250 miles, upon a consumption of coal not exceeding four tons per twenty-four hours, will be required. In addition, a guaranteed speed of four knots an hour under steam alone, for a further distance of 250 miles at sea, upon a consumption of coal not exceeding 1¼ tons for twenty-four hours, will be required. This speed is about that at which the vessel will be run when at work surveying. Economy in the consumption of coal, engineer's stores, and in wear and tear of engine and boiler, is of primary importance. Most favorable consideration will be given to bids in accordance with the economy guaranteed in these expenses, and more particularly with the consumption of coal under steam alone, guaranteed at a rate less than that stipulated at the given speeds.

The first trip will be between the places given below. If the vessel is built at Boston, the trip to be to New-York and back. If built at New-York, to Boston and back, or to Hampton Roads and back. If built on the Delaware, to Newport and back. If built at Baltimore, to Delaware Breakwater and back. This trial trip, if satisfactory, to be at the expense of the Government; if not, then at the expense of the contractor.

The work will be carried on under the personal supervision and inspection of an officer or agent of the Coast Survey, and every facility must be offered him for inspecting the materials and workmanship. Such parts of either as are not in accordance with the drawings and specifications will be rejected, and must be made good by the contractor.

No bids will be considered for this vessel, except from parties regularly engaged in iron-ship building.

The right to reject any or all bids is reserved.

Each bid must be accompanied by a written guarantee, signed by the bidder and a competent surety, (certified to be such by some officer known to this office or the Treasury Department,) in the sum of $20,000, that in the event of the acceptance of such bid, the necessary contract will be entered into within ten days after notice is given by this office that such bid has been accepted, and for the faithful execution of the contract.

The bid should state the sum for which the vessel will be completed, as aforesaid.

Six months from the date of signing the contract will be allowed for the time in which the vessel is to completed.

A copy of each of the general plans and specifications furnished, together with a copy of this advertisement, must be inclosed with each bid, as an evidence of the object of the proposal.

All proposals must be signed, sealed and indorsed, "Proposal for Coast Survey Steamer," and inclosed in an envelope addressed to Prof. Benjamin Peirce, Superintendent Coast Survey, Washington, D. C.

This vessel must be built in accordance with the American Lloyd's specifications for A No. 1 iron vessels for twenty years.

Bidders will be required to furnish with their bids two plans, one on main deck and one below, with an elevation showing the internal arrangements with a view to obtain the best disposition of the several parts.

Any bidder may be present and witness the opening of the bids.

The party whose bid is accepted will be required to furnish an acceptable model, with full detailed plans and specifications, before the contract is closed.

PROPOSALS

FOR CONSTRUCTION OF A SIDE-WHEEL STEAMER OF WOOD FOR REVENUE MARINE SERVICE.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
WASHINGTON, D. C., June 1, 1870.

Separate sealed proposals will be received at this Department until 12 o'clock Friday, July 15, 1870, for building one side-wheel steamer of wood, of 250 tons o. m., for the revenue marine service, for the Pacific coast, to be delivered at the port of San Francisco.

Measurements for tonnage to be according to the old Custom-house rules, taking the length on load line from forward part of stern to after part of stern-post, breadth of beam molded, and depth from under part of deck to top of ceiling.

General specifications for the above vessel will be furnished bidders on application at Custom-house at Boston, New-York, Philadelphia, Baltimore and San Francisco.

A guaranteed speed of 12 knots on a trial course of one mile, and 11 knots for six consecutive hours, will be required.

Favorable consideration will be given to bids in accordance with the rate of speed guaranteed in excess of the rate above stipulated.

The work will be carried on under the personal supervision of an agent of the Treasury Department, and all facilities must be afforded him for inspecting the material and workmanship. Such parts of either as are not in accordance with the drawings and specifications will be rejected, and must be made good by the contractor.

No bids will be considered for this vessel, except from parties regularly engaged in iron-ship building.

The Treasury Department reserves the right to reject any and all bids.

Each bid must be accompanied by a written guarantee signed by the bidder and competent surety, (certified to be such by some officer known to the Department,) in the sum of twenty thousand dollars ($20,000) that in the event of the acceptance of such bid, the necessary contract will be entered into within ten days after notice is given by this Department that the bid has been accepted.

The bid should state the sum for which such vessel will be completed and delivered as aforesaid.

Seven months from the time of signing the contract will be allowed for the completion of the vessel.

A copy of each of the plans and specifications must be inclosed with the bid as evidence as to the object of the proposal.

All proposals must be signed, sealed and indorsed "Proposals for Revenue Steamer," and inclosed in an envelope addressed to the Secretary of the Treasury, Washington, D. C.

Any bidder may be present at the opening of the bids.

Bidders will be required to furnish with their bids a general plan and elevation showing the internal arrangement, with a view to obtain the best disposition of the several parts.

Parties whose bids are accepted will be required to furnish acceptable models, with detailed specifications, before closing contracts.

The vessel must be built according to American Lloyd's specifications for A No. 1 wooden vessels for nine years.

THE RIOT.

Two More Deaths from Injuries Received Reported.

Precarious Condition of Several of the Wounded.

Fuller Details of the Recent Disturbances.

Action of the Coroner—A Survey of the Conduct of the Police.

The terrible riot that occurred on Tuesday afternoon in Elm Park and its immediate neighborhood, in Eighth and Ninth avenues, near Ninetieth-street, made a profound impression upon the public mind yesterday, the details of the disturbance affording a picture of horror and disorder seldom witnessed even in this densely-populated City. The riot was the leading topic of conversation, and it seemed to have a decided effect among all classes of the community, and a general sentiment of regret was expressed that it should have occurred with such disastrous results.

Many reputable citizens, who remember that former anniversaries of the battle of the Boyne were marked in this City by outbreaks and violence, were of opinion that all public demonstrations of both Orangemen and Ribbonmen should be prohibited, as they only serve to provoke breaches of the peace and perpetuate a feud that is intensified by time and remoteness from the scene and causes of its origin. This class argued plausibly that we have native sources of discord in superabundance, and should use all possible means to prevent demonstrations by either Protestant or Catholic Irishmen. There were others, however, who argued in favor of all men of all creeds honoring such days and events as they see fit, and claiming that it is the duty of the Police to use all possible effort to preserve the public peace on all occasions, and it was insisted that had this been done, the disorder of Tuesday would not have occurred. This class was strongly intrenched behind the facts of the particular case which provoked the discussion. Under these circumstances, a natural desire was manifested for further and more comprehensive details of the riots. The account which appeared in the TIMES, yesterday, proved, on subsequent investigation, to be in the main entirely correct, yet there were many new facts obtained yesterday, and fresher events occurring, which will prove of interest.

SCENES AT THE PARK YESTERDAY.

The grounds of Elm Park were visited yesterday by a large number of people who sought to gratify their curiosity by walking over the scenes of the battles there enacted, and judging for themselves of the extent of the struggles. At either corner of the Park resting on Ninetieth-street, the traces of a sanguinary struggle were distinctly visible. The fences were in a state of wreck; the sod was torn and soiled by the pressure of many feet. Large numbers of small stones, similar to those found on newly-made macadamized roads, lay scattered over the grass, while here and there a stray club or fence-picket contributed to the general confusion, and marked the scenes of conflict, as well as shattered guns and heaps of slain betokened a battle-field during the war. A few of those who resided in the neighborhood loitered about and filled the ears of those willing to listen with startling and sometimes improbable stories of the riot.

The extent of the struggle in the Park itself was fully as great as was stated in yesterday's TIMES, though the fact that so few were seriously wounded or killed at that point would seem to contradict the assertion. This is easily explained by the presence of Capt. HELME and his small force of Police, who formed the advance guard of the conservators of the public peace.

They only numbered sixteen men, it is true, and were divided into insignificant squads. Yet these men proved to be brave and reliant, for they first drove rioters into two bodies, and made their initial charge at the corner of Eighth-avenue and Ninetieth-street, and then quelled the second disturbance in Ninth-avenue. The statement made yesterday that the reinforcements of Police took part in dispersing the mob in Ninth-avenue, was incorrect. Capt. HELME and nine men were all who were engaged at that point, and they succeeded in stopping the fight after nearly one hundred of the rioters had forced their way into the park. Thus it was that so few arrests were made, as the Policemen had enough to do to hold possession of the Park.

STATEMENT OF THE ELM PARK PROPRIETOR.

Mr. RENTZ, the proprietor of Elm Park, who was present when the disturbance occurred, thus describes the scenes of disorder as he witnessed them:

"There had been a butcher picnic here the day previous, and they had some live stock in one of the stables, which were to be awarded as prizes for good running. These animals were still remained in the stable yesterday when the Orangemen's Association came out. A more peaceable and well-behaved party I never had on my grounds. They were very orderly, although they were very numerous, and in selling them beer, those who had drank paid for their beer, and instead of hanging about the counter, they retired, and gave the others a chance. Well, I was sitting out talking with some of the ladies and telling them about the butchers' picnic and the cattle, when suddenly a number of shots came from Ninetieth-street. I saw the picknickers all jumping off from the dancing platform and running down toward the house, and then the gate and run out. They could not all get out of the gate quick enough, so some rushed at another part of the fence and broke it down in their haste to get out, and in a short time they were all off of the ground. Those who made the attack threw stones from Ninetieth-street and shot through the fence. I ran on the first appearance of trouble, and ordered my bar to be closed, and I took my money-drawer upstairs. I understood that a woman on the platform was shot in the mouth. She was carried upstairs in my house, and after a while some friends took her away. When I came down stairs I was told that there were some persons lying on the ground, shot. I didn't believe it; so I went and looked, and saw four men lying on the ground, three wounded and one dead. There was also one who was taken upstairs who was clubbed on the head. The picnickers broke my railing, and knocked my tables to pieces to make clubs to protect themselves with, and broke and carried off about one hundred and fifty beer-tumblers, which were used by them for protection against their assailants. The women protected themselves with tumblers. It was a losing day with me. I had the dead and wounded conveyed to the Thirty-first Precinct Station-house in my wagons. Policemen went with each wagon to protect those in it. The first attack was made from Ninetieth-street upon the people in the Park. There would never have been any disturbance if they had not been attacked. There were no inflammatory speeches, as reported in some of the papers. I never saw men conduct themselves more decently. They were enjoying themselves in one place with a fife and drum. This is the first difficulty of any magnitude that has occurred in Elm Park for five years. I did not know what was the character of the party who engaged my grounds. I did not know or expect that they were Orangemen. They did not tell me that they were."

WHO THE RIOTERS WERE.

Considerable difficulty was experienced, even yesterday, in definitely ascertaining who were the originators of the riot. The fact was, however, pretty well established that the main body of rioters did not come from the Boulevard exclusively, the example being set by the Croton Aqueduct men at and in Fifty-ninth-street. These men were much excited at the appearance of the Orangemen, and uttered foolish threats as well as gibes as the procession passed on the route to the Park. The appearance of those men who had come from down-town started the movement to the Croton water men dropped their tools and proceeded up the Boulevard. As they came up to the Boulevard laborers, the latter followed the lead of those who had excited themselves to madness and fury by appealing to their baser passions and national hatred. The scene at this juncture must have been a fearful one, judging from the description of those few who were disinterested spectators. The Orangemen had very imprudently determined to march up the Boulevard, instead of proceeding to the Park in the Eighth-avenue cars, and their unwelcome presence among their faction foes, with their hated Orange ribbons, their banners inscribed and decorated with the name and legendary features of the Prince of ORANGE, and above all their faction tunes of "Over the Boyne Water," "Croppies Lie Down," and others of suggestive import, created the wildest excitement among the ignorant and bitterly-prejudiced Irish laborers. Scarcely had the procession passed when the down-town gangs of excited workmen made their appearance, and by dint of fierce faction cries, and, in some instances, brute force, they either induced or forced the laborers to quit their work and join in the mob as it pushed for Elm Park.

These proceedings necessarily occupied considerable time, and the rioters were not able to reach the Park until after 3 o'clock. It is doubtful, judging from information gleaned yesterday, whether a riot would even then have occurred, had it not been fanned into a fierce and angry flame by the voices and actions of some unknown men, who were evidently acting in concert and with premeditated design. These self-constituted leaders acted in the most determined spirit and assumed the initiative by throwing stones and calling upon their foolish followers to attack the Orangemen. Such was the origin of the riot and its commencement.

PROGRESS OF THE STRUGGLE.

As was stated yesterday, the first assault was made by the Ribbonmen at the corner of Ninetieth-street and Eighth-avenue, and consisted principally of showers of stones and other missiles, enlivened at brief intervals by the discharge of pistols. The Orangemen had began a reply to the assault when Capt. HELME made his appearance with his brave little force of sixteen batons, and dispersed the mob by a brilliant charge. The rioters divided into two gangs after the onslaught of the Police, one going through Ninetieth-street and forcing their way into the Park on the Ninth-avenue side, when they recommenced their assault. Capt. HELME had only nine men with him as he reached this new scene of disorder, the remaining seven having been left behind to do their best in preserving order. Despite his diminished force, Capt. HELME remained undaunted, and proved himself as good a leader as during the draft riots of 1863, for he again rushed into the midst of the melée, although he and his men were exposed to the fire of both the opposing factions. The appearance of the Police seemed to quiet the apprehensions of the Orangemen, for they appear to have desisted from a system of defense, leaving the Police to deal with the mob, while they employed their time in gathering together their affrighted wives and children. The Police drove off the mob, who moved rapidly down the avenue into the Boulevard, and so gained Eighth-avenue by a rapid passage over the fields and through the maze of rude shanties which are found in that section.

The remainder of the rioters pushed up Eighth-avenue, and finding that the Orangemen were leaving the Park in large numbers with their families, they made a cowardly and unprovoked attack upon those hapless people. Men, women and children shared alike in sustaining the brunt of the assault. Such of them as had already gained the cars were saluted by a shower of stones that came hurtling through the windows and inflicted severe wounds, or rattled with dire import over their heads. Those who were still in the road sought refuge in the Central Park, but they were pursued and many terribly beaten. There were only three policemen at this point, and they were almost helpless. Still they endeavored to check the disturbance and managed to aid the car-drivers in starting their vehicles. This created a slight diversion, for some of the Ribbonmen moved angrily down the avenue, and formed a connecting link in the long chain of rioters which had by that time begun to show itself along the track of the railroad. Then ensued a series of skirmishes more or less bloody, and they would have resulted in a long list of casualties had not the Police reinforcements made their appearance. Inspectors DILKS and JAMESON were soon on the ground, and so disposed of the forces at their command that the riot was partially quelled. A small force joined Capt. HELME, and aided him in clearing the park of all evil-disposed men, and protecting those who had been fortunate enough to remain inside the grounds. The disturbance was effectually ended at the park by these means, and the Police stationed along Eighth-avenue began to check the waves of disorder as they broke out along the line.

The riot at Fifty-ninth-street was entirely unforeseen by the Police, as it was believed the rioters had reached that point; but the fight was opened by a crowd of men who had evidently come for the purpose. No sooner had they reached the transfer station of the Railroad Company than they made a rush upon the passengers. Several persons were injured before the reserves of the Sixth and Fourteenth Wards came up on their way to the front. Their opportune appearance stopped the fight, and the entire riot was at an end. As was stated yesterday, several of those who were wounded at Fifty-ninth-street ran into Central Park for protection, which was afforded them by the Park Police, who had been all the time doing good service in aiding the fugitives up town, and piloting them safely through the Park to the western lines of travel. The wounded were sent to the Yorkville Police Station, and from thence to Bellevue Hospital.

A DERELICT POLICE CAPTAIN.

Judging from statements made yesterday, there appears to be good ground for complaint and censure against Capt. THOMAS KILLALEA, commanding the Twenty-second Precinct Police. It is claimed that had he acted up to the instincts of a tru ePolice officer he would have been able to prevent the riot altogether, for he was aware that preparations for it were in progress long before Capt. HELME heard of them. It is now established without any doubt that the Twenty-second Precinct Police apprehended a riot between the Orangemen and the Ribbonmen as early as 11½ o'clock in the forenoon, as it was spoken of in the station-house while the writer was attending the inquest in the case of the murdered SCHNEBLE. The Police stated that the Orangemen were going up the avenues followed by a mob of men and women, and news soon arrived that some laborers were stopping work and preparing to assault the procession. It does not appear that Capt. KILLALEA made any investigation as to the truth of the rumors, nor did he notify the Superintendent of Police that trouble was anticipated. Had he taken proper action he might have checked the disorderly movement of the Croton Aqueduct men, and secured the persons of the leaders. The ounce of prevention would have done more at that time than all the subsequent efforts of the Police.

In total contrast to the neglect of Capt. KILLALEA was the promptness of Capt. JOHN HELME, as soon as the latter became convinced that trouble was impending, he left the Park and proceeded to the Station-house, where he telegraphed to the Superintendent for assistance, giving his reasons. Mr. JOURDAN not having heard from the Captain commanding the lower Precinct that any disturbance was probable, did not at first realize the danger. He therefore asked Capt. HELME if twenty-five men would not be sufficient to preserve the peace instead of the fifty asked for. Capt. HELME had, meanwhile, gathered in his own force, and as he started for the Park sent back word to his superior that the need was urgent. Superintendent JOURDAN then sent forward the reserves of the Sixth, Eighth, Ninth, Fourteenth, Fifteenth, Sixteenth, Eighteenth, Nineteenth and Twenty-second, and it was fortunate he did so. There can be no doubt that had Capt. KILLALEA complied with the rules of the Department, Mr. JOURDAN would have had sufficient time to send a force to the Park before any attack could be made, and the mere presence of these men would have been sufficient to prevent any outbreak.

THE ORANGEMEN AND THE POLICE.

It now appears that when the Orangemen determined to celebrate the day that has caused so much bloodshed ever since the passage of the Boyne by the Prince of ORANGE their leaders made formal application to Superintendent JOURDAN for an escort. Instead of ordering out the entire Police Department, as the Commissioners did on St. Patrick's Day. Mr. JOURDAN responded to the application of the Orangemen by ordering out a platoon of men from the Twenty-eighth Precinct, the occasion of the proposed procession not being deemed of sufficient importance to require a larger force. The escort platoon accompanied the procession through the line of march to Elm Park, where, for some reason, the policemen neglected to stay, and returned immediately to their Station-house, some miles distant. Meanwhile the negligence of Capt. KILLILEA in reporting the fears of his subordinates to the Police Superintendent, left that official in utter ignorance of this first threatening of the public peace. The Orangemen, with their wives and children, to the number of 2,500, as a consequence, were left in the midst of a district inhabited exclusively by their hereditary enemies, with the protection afforded only by the Police of the Thirty-first Precinct, which altogether consists of twenty-three men, out of which Capt. HELME was able to assemble but nine to meet the first onset of 400 infuriated zealots.

Too much praise cannot be given Superintendent JOURDAN for the energy and skill he displayed when the danger of an outbreak was reported to him at 3:20 o'clock by Capt. HELME, in moving the reserves in force upon the threatened point. It is to the credit of the Eighth-avenue Railroad Company, that free transportation was furnished and the Police hurried forward with all possible speed. Upon the part of the Superintendent and the Captains, there was no hesitation when confronted with the riot, and the single mistake was in not using every precaution to render it impossible by stationing a large reserve on the spot early in the day.

LIST OF CASUALTIES.

The following is a corrected list of the killed and wounded as obtained yesterday, several of the unknown having been identified:

Killed.

CHARLES BRADY, aged twenty-four, a native of Ireland, residing in Fifty-third-street, near Eleventh-avenue, had a wife and children, was a marble-polisher, and formerly worked for JACQUES & MOONY, in Fifty-fourth-street. His friends claim that he was out of work and happened to be in the neighborhood of the riot on Tuesday while looking for a job in the Central Park. His body was found by the Police in Chauncey's-lane, near Eighth-avenue, after one of the fights had taken place.

JAMES BRADY, aged fifteen, a native of Ireland, residing in Fifty-fourth-street. He was employed in carrying tools for the workmen on sewers in the Boulevard, and joined the mob. He was killed in Eighth-avenue, near Ninetieth-street, by a pistol-shot in the forehead. The father of the boy insisted that his son was not a rioter, though the Police differ with him. Mr. BRADY was very much excited in the Station-house yesterday, and announced that he would have justice on the Orangemen if it cost him $100.

DANIEL B. CROWLEY, aged 45, a native of Ireland, residing in Broadway, near Sixty-eighth-street, was killed by a pistol-shot in Elm Park, as he was entering the inclosure at Ninetieth-street. He was a member of the Boulevard gang.

FRANCIS WOOD, of No. 622 Ninth-street, who had received a fracture of the skull, died in Bellevue Hospital at a late hour on Tuesday night. He was 35 years of age and resided at No. 623 East Ninth-street.

An unknown man, who entered Bellevue Hospital in an insensible condition, died yesterday afternoon, and his remains were placed in the Morgue for identification.

Wounded.

The following are the wounded remaining in Bellevue Hospital, all of whose hurts are of a serious character, four being considered fatal cases:

JOHN SHIELDS, aged forty years; residence, Hastings.

WILLIAM CAIN, aged thirty-one; residence, No. 1,495 Third-avenue.

ROBERT NUTT, thirty; No. 66 Gansevoort-street.

SAMUEL SMITH, thirty-five; No. 174 Mulberry-street.

MARY MORRISSEY, aged twenty-one; No. 187 Forsyth-street.

THOMAS MURRAY, thirty-nine; No. 22 North Moore-street.

PATRICK CAIN, forty; No. 429 East Fifteenth-street.

JOHN HERON, thirty; No. 346 West Twenty-sixth-street.

JOHN JOHNSON, thirty-five; No. 144 Mulberry-street.

THOMAS S. ADAMS aged fifty-three, of No. 524 West Thirtieth-street.

An unknown man, still insensible, and cannot live.

THOMAS BARNETT, aged thirty, of No. 131 West Twenty-eighth-street.

JOHN HERON, aged thirty, of East Seventeenth-street.

All of these except MARY MORRISSEY, are natives of Ireland, and some of them are not expected to recover.

There were, of course, very many who went home with slight cuts and contusions, of whom no record has been or can be obtained, and among these were undoubtedly many women and children. It is not probable, however, that any of those killed and disabled by wounds were carried off the field of battle by friends, and it is therefore almost certain that the list embraces all cases of death or serious hurts.

ACTION OF THE CORONER.

Capt. HELME yesterday notified Coroner SCHIRMER of the necessity of his action in the case of the three men killed on Tuesday, and whose remains were lying in the One Hundredth-street Police Station. The Coroner decided that, as the Police Captain was not quite ready to proceed and furnish the witnesses required, to postpone the inquest until Tuesday next, in order that the Police may hunt up evidence. Superintendent JOURDAN has already detailed Detectives CLAPP and BENNETT to assist Capt. HELME, and it is understood that a list of witnesses has been made, though the names are prudently withheld for the present.

Dr. JOSEPH CUSHMAN, Deputy to Coroner SCHIRMER, proceeded yesterday afternoon to make the necessary post-mortem examination of the bodies of the men to be found at the Station-house. In the case of CHARLES BRADY, the doctor found that death had been caused by a pistol-shot wound, the bullet having entered the body between the first and second ribs on the left side, one inch to the left of the median line, the course of the ball being downward and backward to the spine, between the seventh and eighth ribs. The missile traversed the left lung, and the immediate cause of death was hemorrhage, the thorax being found full of blood. The ball was imbedded in the spinal column. He found the skull of JAMES BRADY so lacerated that it was impossible to determine the nature of the fatal wound. The statement that the boy was struck in the forehead by two bullets is based upon finding two holes in his cap. The skull was smashed and the brains crushed out of shape and substance, so that the trace of the bullet could not be found.

In examining the remains of DANIEL B. CROWLEY, a pistol-shot wound was found 6½ inches from the right nipple with oblique direction, 8½ inches from median line, and 7 inches below the oxilla. The ball passed upward and outward, and emerged between the fourth and fifth ribs on the left side, having passed through the lobes of both lungs and heart, also causing a rupture of the liver where it entered the body. The remains were then surrendered to the relatives, who removed them in rough-looking carts filled with straw, the proceeding being viewed with singular interest by a group of women and children who had assembled near the door of the Police Station.

ARRAIGNMENT OF THE PRISONERS.

JACOB PETERS, aged thirty-four, a German store-keeper, residing in Eighth-avenue, near Seventy-second-street, who had been arrested for firing a pistol and being drunk and disorderly, was yesterday arraigned before Justice MCQUADE, at the Harlem Police Court. The Magistrate decided that there was no evidence to connect him with the riot, and so released the accused.

JOHN BOYD, aged twenty-six, a clerk, native of the United States, married, residing at No. 306 West Twelfth-street, had been arrested by Officer FAVELL for disorderly conduct. The Magistrate held him for examination.

ROBERT PERSON, aged twenty-nine, a native of Ireland, laborer, residing in Tenth-avenue, between Twenty-fifth and Twenty-sixth streets, was arraigned for disorderly conduct, and remanded for examination.

Considerable surprise was manifested in various circles of society, that so few arrests had been made by the Police during the progress of the riots. So far as Capt. HELME'S command is concerned—they having made all the arrests reported—it is easy of explanation. He had only nine men with him when he made a dash upon the mob, consequently they could not have arrested more than that number. To secure their persons in the Station-house the Police would have been compelled to leave the scene and abandon the picnic party to another assault. Why the squads of Police scattered along the avenue failed to make any arrests, is not fully explained. Their failure to do so presents the only bad feature in the conduct of the force present on the ground.

Inquiry was made yesterday at the Police Headquarters for tidings of one JOHN GARDNER, aged twenty-two, residing at No. 524 West Thirty-seventh-street. He had attended the picnic and was seen in the Park, by a friend just before the riot commenced. As his relatives failed to find him at Bellevue Hospital or any where else, his whereabouts are a mystery. Search will be made for him.

DEATH OF ANOTHER VICTIM.

WM. KANE, one of those injured in the Elm Park riot, died last evening, at Bellevue Hospital. It was he who was attacked in Central Park, by a number of Orangemen, while returning from his work, totally ignorant of the riot, in which he had taken no part. He was shot at and beaten, but death resulted from a frightful stab wound, apparently given by a saber, in the right side. He resided at No. 1,495 Third-avenue.

Another Riot Prevented.

The body of FRANCIS WOOD, one of those injured during the Elm Park riot, who died at Bellevue Hospital within a few hours, was last evening conveyed to his former residence, No. 623 East Ninth-street. WOOD, who had worked in the Brooklyn Navy-yard, had been an Orangeman, and the appearance of the remains in Jackerelville was the signal for the gathering of a large crowd about the house which contained them, to hoot and indulge in other disorderly demonstrations. The fact was promptly reported to Capt. BENNETT, at the Eleventh Precinct Station-house, and he lost no time in repairing to the spot with his reserves. The appearance of the Police was sufficient to disperse the crowd, but Capt. BENNETT left a sufficient force to prevent any reassembling of the Ribbonmen, who seemed disposed to renew the horrible scenes of Tuesday.

Meeting of the Orangemen—Another Picnic to be held in August—Belligerent Resolutions.

The Orangemen held a meeting on Tuesday night after they had escaped from the clutches of the mob, and after an excited and stormy discussion decided that they considered that they possessed as much right to parade in regalia and with appropriate banners on any day they pleased to select as members of St. Patrick's Societies. They spoke of the fact that the celebration of the battle of the Boyne was a simple picnic, and their families participated in the pleasures of the day, and failed to see any occasion or provocation for an assault upon them. The sense of the meeting was then taken on the question of asserting their rights to hold picnics and parade, and it was decided in the affirmative with a unanimous vote, amid much enthusiasm. The Orangemen then decided that, believing they were entitled to as much protection as their fellow-countrymen of opposite faith, they would hold another celebration in August, and ask the authorities for the necessary and proper protection. If it was not granted, they would proceed with their celebration, and, if interfered with or assaulted, they would defend themselves in a thorough and determined manner.

Fifth Assembly District Colored Republican Association.

The colored voters of the Fifth Assembly District have formed an organization under the name of the Colored Union Republican Association, and last evening they met and adopted a constitution and by-laws, and ratified the nomination of officers made by their committee. The President of the Association is T. S. W. TITUS; the Secretary, CHAS. L. REASON; and there are three Vice-Presidents, a Corresponding Secretary and Treasurer. After the formal ratification of the constitution and the election of officers, the meeting was addressed by Mr. TITUS, GEO. W. FRANCIS, WM. THOMPSON, JAMES LEWIS, GEO. W. LAWRENCE, the editor of the colored organ, the Enterprise, and others. A resolution was offered by Mr. FRANCIS declaring that the Association would take no part in the issues which divide the Republican Party in this City, which was adopted, after a short debate. The meeting shortly after adjourned.

THE CUSTOM-HOUSE.

Mr. Grinnell's New Position—When the New Collector Will Take His Seat.

Affairs around the Custom-house, yesterday, were rather more quiet. The host of office-seekers had evidently made up their minds that the granite building was no place for them until Mr. MURPHY should be duly installed, and they therefore transferred their base of operations elsewhere. Some went down to Long Branch to hear what the wild waves would say to them, and some hastened to No. 88 Wall-street, room No. 8, to hear Howe and what their chances of success were.

Mr. GRINNELL was at his office in good season, looking as if his rest had not been disturbed by unpleasant dreams, and apparently pleased that he was soon to be relieved from the cares of a very vexatio us office. He regards his new position of Naval Officer as far preferable to that of Collector. It is a place where there is very little labor, and indeed is one of the best positions in the gift of the Government. After he is duly installed, Mr. GRINNELL will take his vacation, which he sadly needs, not having been absent from his post as Collector but two days since he was sworn in.

Those of Mr. GRINNELL'S friends who regard the change of offices as a slight, will be pleased to learn that Mr. GRINNELL does not consider it such. His relations with the President are very pleasant, and he will labor as earnestly in the future for the welfare of the Republican Party as he has in the past. The President, in tendering Mr. GRINNELL the Naval Office, said that he considered it one of the best positions in his gift, and one in which Mr. GRINNELL could rid himself of the vexations and annoyances to which he was subjected as Collector. The Naval Officer is equal in rank to the Collector, and independent of that officer entirely. Every transaction that passes through the Collector's hands must be indorsed by the Naval officer, and in this way the two offices are of equal importance. The perquisites are the same and the salary is only $1,000 less, while the bond is only $10,000 and that of the Collector is $80,000. Mr. GRINNELL is so desirous of being released from the cares of his office that he will vacate at the earliest possible moment and use all the means in his power to facilitate Mr. MURPHY'S entrée. Had not Mr. MURPHY been confirmed, Mr. GRINNELL would have insisted that a change be made, and very likely the President might have adopted his suggestion and appointed Gen. MERRITT to the Collectorship, thus permitting Mr. GRINNELL to exchange places with him.

There is considerable formality to be gone through before Mr. MURPHY can take his seat. His bonds must be filled out and sent for action for approval, and after they are returned the new Collector will be sworn in by one of the United States Judges. Then he may appear and take his office, when Mr. GRINNELL will retire to the other end of the building. There is nothing more to be said respecting Mr. MURPHY'S views than was expressed in the TIMES of yesterday. It is not believed that any radical changes will be made, but that whatever are made will take place gradually.
